ETHIOPIA WON'T SURRENDER

GERMAN PEACE PLEDGE

HITLER'S MAY DAY PRONOUNCEMENT

RUSSIA SHOWS HER CLAWS

(Special To "Telegraph")

Berlin, May 1.
Two million Germans acclaimed Herr Adolf Hitler, the Chancellor, as he drove through the city this afternoon to the Imperial Castle, where he addressed a vast crowd on the nation's desire for peace.
The speech was broadcast throughout the country.

May Day celebrations assumed an air of carnival. Taverns and beer shops, which have been freed of all restrictions for three days, were crowded. Many have been, and will remain open all night.

Thousands cheered Herr Hitler when he appeared on the balcony of the Chancellery.
There was a military torchlight procession along the Unterden Linden.

—Reuter Special.

FEW DISTURBANCES

London, May 1.
May Day was celebrated throughout the world with remarkably few disturbances.

The largest demonstrations were in Moscow, where 30,000 troops and 1,150,000 civilians paraded before the Russian Dictator, M. Stalin.

Some 300 tanks paraded in the review, while 700 aeroplanes swept over Russia's old capital.

Spain, where the Leftists have recently come into complete control of the Government, marked the day with a complete cessation of all business and amusements. There were no public services and all shops, cafes and restaurants were closed.

The Labourites in Sofia held a monster rally under Government auspices.

Three persons were killed in a clash between demonstrators and police at Dulhoid, near Sarazagora.

The day passed quietly in Paris and London.—Reuter Special.

12 Millions Out Of Work In America

30-HOUR WEEK MAY SOLVE PROBLEM

ROOSEVELT'S POLICY

Washington, May 1.
The United States Federation of Labour statistics have loaded the unemployment problem with political dynamite.

The question of what to do with America's jobless is to be a major political puzzle during the next four years' presidential term of office. The Federation estimates that 12,000,000 people are still unemployed and revealing statements have come recently from labour and business administrations.

Senators Black and Connally are still patiently awaiting a hearing of their Thirty Hour Week Bill.

President Roosevelt, and the Secretary of Labour, Miss Frances Perkins' most recent speeches have indicated that the Black-Connally Bill or a similar remedy may head the New Deal's legislative programme next year, provided the New Deal is still in office.

Mr. Daniel Roper, Secretary of Commerce, has bluntly said that industry could provide jobs or reconcile itself to continued relief taxation.

Miss Perkins in a recent Detroit speech, said that if industry prefers the Administration's plans to fail, others must be adopted. It is worthy of note that the Thirty Hour Week Bill is Labour's strongest substitute.

In his speech at Baltimore, President Roosevelt said: "Some will tell you that even a completely restored prosperity will still leave a permanent army of unemployed. I do not accept that. We propose to attack the problem in every conceivable manner."

The Opposition claims that if business returns to the 1929 levels there will still be 7,000,000 jobless.
President Roosevelt's "I do not accept this" suggests that the New Deal is prepared for a movement on several fronts to cope with the nation's biggest problem.—United Press.

HEARS RUSSIA'S THREATS

M. Stalin, the Soviet Dictator, who watched his people parade on May Day with banners warning the world that Russia would lead it to peace or subdue it in war.

MOORE HITS TWO HOMERS

WINS GAME FOR BOSTON BRAVES

GROVE BLANKS INDIANS

New York, May 1.

The mighty Moore, Boston's ace pitcher, was the hero of the day when the Braves met the Pittsburgh Pirates at home, for his two home runs gave his team a much-needed victory.

Both the Braves and the Pirates managed ten hits, but because of Moore, Boston converted these into six runs, while the Pittsburgh visitors could only muster four tallies.

The Cincinnati Reds topped the Phillies at Philadelphia, winning by four to three. Each team had seven hits and two errors.

The New York Giants game with the Chicago Cubs was washed out by the rain.

Dizzy Dean gave a remarkably fine performance for the St. Louis Cardinals when he held the Brooklyn Dodgers to three hits, while his mates scored twelve runs on fourteen hits. O'Dowd hit a homer.

Brooklyn could not score and committed four errors into the bargain.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

The veteran Lefty Grove pitching for Boston's Red Sox, kept Cleveland's hits scattered to-day. The Indians connected with seven of the speed-ball twirler's deliveries, but never very effectively, and could not score a run.

Grove's team-mates boisterously hit ten sizzling safeties and scored six runs.

The New York Yankees beat the Chicago White Sox at Chicago, but only by the narrowest margin, three to two. Chicago committed three errors, but the Yankees were sure of themselves and made their nine hits count. The Sox hit seven.

Detroit's Tigers, last year's champions, nosed out the Philadelphia Athletics, playing at home, scoring four runs on seven hard hits. The Philadelphiaans were able to score only three on eight connections. They gave away two errors.

The St. Louis Browns were swamped by the Washington Senators. The Browns, playing at home, were helpless against the Senators' big guns. They could only reply with five hits, and one run, to Washington's barrage of eighteen hits and 17 tallies at the plate.—Reuter.

In connection with the farewell of Sir Thomas and Lady Southern to-day, a special police guard of honour, under Mr. L. H. C. Calhoun, A.S.P., was provided at Queen's Pier.

NEGUS STILL DEFIANT

MOVING SEAT OF GOVERNMENT

ARMY OF FORLORN HOPE GOES TO MEET ATTACK

ADDIS ABABA, MAY 1.

IT IS UNDERSTOOD THAT THE EMPEROR OF ETHIOPIA, AFTER CONFERRING WITH HIS GOVERNMENT, HAS DECIDED THAT THERE WILL BE NO SURRENDER TO THE ITALIANS, WHOSE ARMIES ARE NOW PRESSING UPON ADDIS ABABA.

Believing in the absolute justice of his cause, and despite his defeats, caused by the overwhelming numbers of invading troops and their superior equipment, the Emperor has decided to continue the struggle.

It is believed that the Empress and other members of the Royal Family of Ethiopia, except for the Emperor and Crown Prince, will shortly leave for Jerusalem. The Negus and his eldest son will remain with their people, leading the fight against the invaders. The Government, meanwhile, will probably move westward.

The Emperor is holding a conference with the diplomatic corps this afternoon, to discuss precautions necessary for the protection of foreign nationals in the event of an Italian entry into the capital. There are British-Indian troops in Addis Ababa, guarding the British Legation.

The Emperor has especially appealed to all able-bodied citizens to march northward to-morrow with five days' provisions to attempt to stem the Italian tide of advance. The leader of this forlorn hope will be Ras Getachew.—Reuter.

Won't Negotiate

Addis Ababa, May 1.
Emperor Haile Selassie received the press to-day immediately prior to the departure of 5,000 Imperial Guards for the hills.

He said his abandonment of the capital, under pressure, was not significant now that the Government will be established further south.

"I will never negotiate peace directly with the Italians. This country will negotiate only through the League of Nations. I will never leave my country of my own free will," he exclaimed.

"Will the outside world abandon us to our fate?" he asked, finally.

Avoiding Bloodshed

The Emperor said that although he was leaving the capital undefended in order to avoid unnecessary bloodshed, he would be in communication with the outside world from his new seat of Government, and he would continue to urge the League of Nations to enforce a settlement upon Italy.

"Ethiopia is not suing for peace. I shall reorganise and fight again. The war is not over by a long way."

This was the Emperor's defiance. Tired and haggard, his beard streaked with grey and his hands bandaged, reportedly because they have been burned by Italian gas, the correspondents left him.—United Press.

No New Peace Terms

London, May 1.
It is learned in authoritative circles in London that Great Britain will not put forward any new terms for peace in Ethiopia.—Reuter.

Capital Uncaptured

Rome, May 1.
An official spokesman to-day warned correspondents against premature reporting the capture of Addis Ababa.

"It is a question of days, not hours; perhaps even six to eight days," he said. "Gentlemen, please have patience."—United Press.

Lake Tsana Airport

Rome, May 1.
It is announced that a completely equipped airport for flying boats is in the course of construction by the Emperor's Government.—(Continued on Page 5.)

Big British Contracts

SEVERAL SECURED IN CANTON

The securing of a £2,000,000 contract by a British engineering group for the construction of a modern iron and steel works in Canton was announced a few days ago. This, it is interesting to learn, follows the successful tendering for other big contracts in Canton by British interests, amongst which may be mentioned the following:

Messrs. Platt Bros. & Co., Ltd., of Oldham, have recently completed the installation of a cotton mill and woolen mill.

Messrs. James Mackie & Sons, Ltd., of Belfast, have supplied the machinery for a jute mill.

Messrs. Ruston, Hornsby, Ltd., of Lincoln, have supplied the power plants for a cotton and woolen mill and a jute mill.

The above firms are represented in Hongkong by Messrs. Reiss, Massey & Co., Ltd., 7 Queen's Road Central, who obtained these valuable orders on behalf of their principals.

GENERAL'S DEATH

London, May 1.
General Sir Philip Nash, who was responsible in several capacities at different times for transport arrangements of the British forces in France during the Great War, and also during the Ministry of Munitions, died in London to-day, aged 60.—Bulletin Service.

RUSSIANS WOULD FORCE PEACE ON WORLD

Moscow, May 1.
The Soviet to-day exhibited its armed might in May Day parades and demonstrations.

Massed infantry, artillery, cavalry and tanks paraded the Red Square before the Dictator, M. Stalin, followed by countless thousands of workers, bearing placards proclaiming their hatred of Fascists and their determination to lead the world to peace or, if necessary, defeat it in war.

CUTS CANADA'S TARIFFS

Canada made the first move to reduce the trade barriers shutting off world trade to-day, when the Prime Minister, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, announced a wide tariff reduction.

CANADA REDUCES TARIFFS

COMPANY TAXATION INCREASED

INCOME TAX UNCHANGED

Ottawa, May 1.

The Canadian Government has brought down a Budget which reduces tariffs over a wide range, maintaining the Imperial preference rates, and to make up for the loss of revenue which may possibly result, has increased corporation income taxes.

Personal income taxes remain unchanged.

Corporation income taxes are increased from 13.5 per cent. to 15 per cent. The tax on consolidated income of companies and their subsidiaries is increased from 15 to 17 per cent. The sales tax has risen from six to eight per cent.

Under the British preference, all iron and steel and machinery, of a description not made in Canada, and a number of other items, are placed on the free list. The preferential tariff remains.

Existing specific duties on all yarns or fabrics, wholly cotton or artificial silk, are removed.

The duties on a number of sorts of goods imported under British preference or intermediate tariff rates, have been reduced substantially.—Reuter.

ECONOMIC IMPROVEMENT

Ottawa, May 1.
Canada's economic improvement was shown in revenue totalling $372,000,000 and expenditure amounting to $534,000,000. Of the expenditure, $374,000,000 is for ordinary outgoings and the remainder extraordinary, including relief and railway deficits.

Canada is now sixth, instead of eighth, among the nations in world trade. Imports for the year totalled $583,000,000 compared with $522,000,000 in the previous year, while exports were $765,000,000, compared with $680,000,000.

Including gold exports of $119,000,000 and tourist trade balance of $110,000,000, the surplus was $445,000,000.—Reuter Special.

STOP PRESS

New Orleans, May 1.

Police to-day captured Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy Number One, in a climax of a nation-wide search during the past several months.

Twice previously he had shot his way out of police hands, but this time he surrendered meekly.

He is wanted for murder.—Reuter.

RESENTS TRADE TREATY

CHINA'S VIEWS ON GERMAN PACT

MANCHUKUO BENEFITS

Nanking, May 2.

Questioned concerning the trade agreement concluded between Germany and Manchukuo, a Foreign Office spokesman recalled that on April 29 the German Charge d'Affaires called at the Foreign Office and informed the Chinese Government of the impending conclusion of these arrangements, which the German diplomat pointed out were of a purely commercial character, and devoid of political significance.

The Foreign Office, which is awaiting the text of the arrangement, takes a serious view of the matter.

The spokesman added that appropriate steps would be taken, though he did not indicate the nature of China's action. No action will be decided upon until the text of the treaty is received.—Reuter.

TOKYO VERSION

Tokyo, May 2.
Under the German-Manchukuo trade agreement, the German Foreign Exchange Administration reportedly permits importation of Manchukuoan products to the amount of 100,000,000 yen during the twelve months, commencing June 1.

Germany is paying for these imports three-quarters in foreign exchange and a quarter in Reichsmarks.

Manchukuo agree to utilise these Reichsmarks in paying for German products exported to Manchukuo.

Subject to certain stipulations, a certain proportion of Japan's favourable trade balance with Germany will be made available for additional German imports from Manchukuo.

Negotiation for the renewal of trade arrangements must be opened not later than April 1, 1937.—Reuter.

ANOTHER SHIPPING STRIKE

U.S. "OUTLAWS" BID FOR POWER

WARRING ON UNION

New York, May 1.
Mr. Joseph Curran, leader of the so-called "outlaw faction" of the International Seamen's Union, has called a general strike on the Atlantic seaboard for Monday, following the breakdown of negotiations to submit the present wage dispute to a referendum of members.

Shipping executives warn that the strike would be a breach of contract, and Union leaders agree with them, but can do nothing to curb the "outlaw" faction.

Mr. Ivan Hunter, Secretary of the Union, said the referendum proposal was part of a plan of Communist agitators seeking to terminate the Union's agreement with shipping companies "for the definite purpose of destroying the International and substituting a Communist controlled organisation."—United Press.

Rebels Fire On Negus

Addis Ababa, May 1.

The Emperor of Ethiopia narrowly escaped death at the hands of rebel tribesmen some time ago, according to General Korniloff, who was Ras Kassa's adviser during the Makala campaign.

General Korniloff states that rebels of Malaga fired upon the Imperial suite, killing the Emperor's valet who was standing by his master's side. The Emperor's chamberlain also fell, mortally hurt.

The Emperor, however, escaped untouched by a seeming miracle.—Reuter Special.

A Prince's Romance Ends

MISS MARGARITA BRAMBECK

PRINCE BERTIL, twenty-three-year-old grandson of King Gustav of Sweden, two years ago asked his grandfather's consent to marry Margarita Brambeck, blonde, twenty-year-old Stockholm shop-girl. Gustav's advice was to wait two years.

Now, the two years up, Prince Bertil has arrived in Nice, where King Gustav is staying. But the romance is ended. Prince Bertil said:

"I am in Nice merely for a holiday and to see my grandfather," he said.

"And Miss Brambeck?" he was asked.

"No, that flushed some time ago. We are still friends, but I am working in Paris as Swedish naval attaché."

DUKE WILL PROCLAIM CORONATION DAY

TWO dates—May 20 and May 27—are now under consideration for the King's Coronation next year.

Both days are Thursdays. Coronation day will be a public holiday.

When the date is announced in a few weeks it will be proclaimed throughout Britain and the Empire.

"GREAT CEREMONY"

He will act with Wing Commander Hoddell, head of the department, in coordinating the London medical services as part of the defence schemes.

In other parts of the country the work will be done by local medical officers.

Major Blackmore, who will be available for advice and for lectures to doctors and nurses, is already in his new post, was with the R.A.M.C. in the war. Later he was attached to the Chemical Warfare Research Department of the War Office.

6,000 MILE FOR 75 SECONDS THRILL

SCIENTISTS' TREK TO ECLIPSE

WHAT HONGKONG WILL SEE OF IT

A TOTAL eclipse of the sun occurs on June 19 and preparations for its observation are well in hand.

It will be visible from a narrow belt of country about a hundred miles wide, starting south of Greece, crossing Turkey, Russia and Japan, and ending in the Pacific.

The two official expeditions from Britain will go to Tomsk in Russia and to Northern Japan. The first will be taken by Professor Carroll, of Aberdeen, and the second by Professor Stratton, of Cambridge.

Professor Stratton is already on his way and Professor Carroll left England at the end of April.

A private expedition from the Rev. T. E. R. Phillips's observatory at Headley, Surrey, will be taken to Chios Island, in the Greek Archipelago, and will leave in May.

Cruising Party
Finally, a number of eminent British astronomers are taking a Mediterranean cruise in the liner Strathaird, which is due to cross the track of totality just south of Athens at the critical time.

A total eclipse of the sun is one of the most magnificent spectacles in nature and the astronomers in the Strathaird will be able to enjoy the sight of it unencumbered by the business of working scientific instruments.

Although I have been a member of eclipse expeditions I have never yet, in the rush of handling instruments, had an opportunity for really seeing the phenomenon.

Scattered along the lines as it crosses Russia will be numerous Russian expeditions and also one from Harvard in America.

Corona Beauty
The reason astronomers go to such lengths to observe a total solar eclipse is that it is only during the brief period when the sun is completely hidden by the moon that one is able to see and study the sun's extensive outer atmosphere.

At the instant that the last vestige of the sun disappears there flashes into view the beautiful radiating streamers of the corona and the dazzling scarlet flames which lie at the bases of the streamers.

Study of these phenomena is not only of astronomical interest; it has shed much light on the intricate problems connected with the internal structure of the atom.

Duration of totality at the coming eclipse will be between one and a quarter and two and a half minutes in different parts of the track. Rarely do they last as much as seven minutes; many are over in a few seconds.

In Hongkong
In Hongkong only a partial eclipse will be seen. When the sun rises the eclipse will already be in progress, and it will reach its maximum phase, when half the sun is covered, at 5.15 a.m. (Summer Time).

In view of the low sun in China the equipment that is being taken is comparatively simple. It will consist of a camera 12ft. long and a battery of smaller cameras, with some of which infra-red plates will be used.

These, with the necessary mechanism for making them follow the movement of the sun during the exposures, will be erected on ground about 2,000ft. high overlooking the sea.

WOMEN are to be conscripted in Czechoslovakia. New laws which will come before Parliament tomorrow compel women to assist in national defence.

They will be conscripted for service in munition factories, "essential industries," hospitals and military clerical posts.

A supreme State defence council will be formed of members of the Cabinet and the General Staff presided over by President Benes. They will legislate by decrees over the head of Parliament.

The death penalty will be introduced for spying.

Discoveries and patents will be examined by military experts to find if they have a military value.

CENSORSHIP
Political parties which endanger the State can be dissolved.

Foreigners will not be allowed inside the frontier zones without military permission.

Press censorship will be introduced.

Mining and building near the Czech frontiers must be approved first by military experts.

Every one between seventeen and sixty who cannot perform military duties must assist in State defence in some capacity or contribute money or material.

NOTE—General conscription exists already in Czechoslovakia.

BELA KUN'S £28,000
Bela Kun, the notorious Communist agent, after a few days in Barcelona, is reported to have gone to Madrid.

During his stay here he has been in close touch with Communists and Marxists with the object of organising the return of Communist candidates at the municipal elections. Their aim is to establish Soviet rule in the country.

Bela Kun is accompanied by Novov, organiser of the Asturias revolution in October 1934.

In Barcelona he has had the help of Andros Nin, ex-secretary of Trotsky in Moscow.

Kun is well supplied with funds, it being stated that in Barcelona he had about £28,000 to distribute.

THE KING'S 'I SERVE'

The King, addressing 500 representatives of "privileged bodies" who went to Buckingham Palace last month to present addresses of congratulation on his accession, said:—

"I have witnessed the horrors of war . . . I got to know the hardships of men at the front."

"I realise the hardships of those who, through no fault of their own, have had the misfortune to endure long periods of unemployment."

"As Prince of Wales I bore a device with an ancient motto, 'I serve.' . . . As King I shall hold this in constant remembrance, for a king can perform no higher function than that of service."

The Queen Mary May Have Two Little Sisters

It is possible that the giant liner Queen Mary will have two little sisters instead of one big one.

No official request for financial guarantee has been made to the Government yet by the Cunard White Star Company, but when the matter is raised the desirability of two or more smaller and very fast ships will be fully investigated.

There is a strong feeling in influential quarters that smaller ships are to be preferred.

Corporal's Error In Tactics

Aldershot, Apr. 25.
Having completed 18 years' military service to the day with an unblemished record, Lance-Corporal A. J. Watkins (33), Royal Corps of Signals, Aldershot, gathered his friends for a celebration.

This was a complete success, except that at 3 a.m. he was found trying to climb into his General's house, apparently under the impression that he was entering his own barrack room in an unorthodox manner sometimes adopted when it is wise to let sleeping N.C.O.s lie.

There was a sequel to-day, when Watkins was charged before a district court-martial with attempting to break into the residence of General Sir Francis Gathorne Hardy, G.O.C., with intent to commit a felony.

"Absolutely not guilty," was his reply to the charge, and he went on to describe the celebration. "I remember going into a mess late in the evening," he said. "After that everything was blank until I came to in the guard room at Government House."

The blank was filled in by the defending officer, who said that Watkins opened a ground floor window and when the General's butler looked out Watkins cried: "Pull me up; pull me up, I'm tired."

Watkins told the Court he was drunk and not responsible. He was found not guilty and immediately released, his character still unblemished.

TOURISTS TOLD OF LIONS POSING AT FIVE FEET

Tanganyika, Apr. 28.
"Don't shoot our lions, please—unless it's with a camera."

Notices to this effect are being posted near the highways in Tanganyika by the Society for the Preservation of the Fauna of the Empire.

If they spare the gun, tourists are welcome to take all the pictures they like. The lions, it is explained, don't mind posing for the camera at a distance of five yards. In fact, they rather like it.

So travellers are warned that if a maned lion with honey and cubes approach their cars not to shoot. They just want to be photographed.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, May 1. Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Dow Jones summary of yesterday's market:—The market to-day was irregularly higher and an extremely quiet session was witnessed. Aviation shares were very strong, and the volume of trading was good. Motors were mixed on Cramm's weekly production report indicating that the output is slightly off. Steel stocks sank, probably due to the fact that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation's first-quarter report failed to meet expectations. Farm-implement and mail-order issues advanced. Electric-equipment shares were strong on a Chamber of Commerce report indicating that new electrical orders for the first three months of the year totalled $152,452,432, compared with $121,000,000 during the corresponding period of last year. Oil stocks were firm. The market for bonds was higher. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were mixed, but quiet.

Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Wall Street Journal comment on 30/4 market:—"No immediate revision in the Federal Reserve Board's margin regulations is likely. The heavy demand for steel gives promise of increasing operations. Some observers are inclined to view the consumers' goods industries temporary, due to relief and bonus payments."

S. C. & F. New York office cables: Stocks: The market showed no definite trend and continued irregularly. The Bethlehem Steel Corporation earned 50 cents per preferred share during the March quarter against a loss of $607,298 last year. The Curtis-Wright Company earned $309,768 during the March quarter as compared with a loss of $197,348 during the corresponding period last year.

Cotton: The crop outlook is favourable, but distant positions are strong, and in demand. The approach 10 cents. Forwardings to mills during the past week totalled 214,000 bales as compared with 214,000 bales the previous week.

Wheat: Further rains and forecast of wet conditions in the South-West have unsettled the market. The foreign and mill markets are easier. Messrs. Bennett & Company estimate the winter crop at 552,000,000 bushels.

Rubber: There is renewed talk of an increase in tyre prices. The market is quiet and narrow. It is estimated that the English stocks of rubber will show a decrease of 1,500 tons. Malaysian exports in April amounted to 35,999 tons.

Joe E. Brown's latest Warner Bros. picture, "Alibi Ike" which is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Star Theatre on Sunday, is heralded as the most hilarious film in which the famous star has yet appeared. The story was written by the late Ring Lardner, who probably knew baseball players better than any other writer. It's a pennant winning comedy of baseball and blunders. Joe, of course, has the title role, Olivia de Havilland, a newcomer to the screen, has the feminine lead. CINEMA NOTES

Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper, who are co-starring in Paramount's romantic comedy, "Desire," now screening at the Queen's Theatre, stand at the top of a list, prepared by Director F. Borzage, of the famous screen love teams of all time.

The Dietrich-Cooper combination leads off in the selection which includes such stars as Greta Garbo and Farrell, Crawford and Gable, Powell and Loy and Colbert and MacMurray. The comedy and romance are skillfully blended in this picture which brings Dietrich and Cooper together for the first time since "Morocco." In the supporting cast are such screen notables as John Halliday, Akim Tamiroff, Ernest Cossart, William Frawley and Alan Mowbray.

"The Bohemian Girl"

When Michael William Balfe, poetic Irishman, wrote the popular opera, "The Bohemian Girl," nearly a century ago, little did he dream that it would one day be the basis of a comedy motion picture. The opus, as he conceived it, was a dramatic and sometimes morbid story concerning the adventures of a gypsy band, interspersed with ballads noted for their pathetic sentimentality. Now come Laurel and Hardy's interpretations of fun, as stars of a new and hilarious version of the noted epic, a version dedicated to joy and laughter, but nevertheless "The Bohemian Girl". Their full-length motion picture suggested by the Balfe opera begins to-day at the Kings and Alhambra Theatres, and judging by the current interest in this advent, the screen version holds a greater interest for entertainment seekers than did any of the stage productions of the same title.

Produced by Hal Rosson-M-G-M, the feature picture has lost nothing of the spirit of the original manuscript. Practically all of the never-to-be-forgotten music, both instrumental and vocal, has been retained in the film. Such familiar ballads as "I Dreamt I Dwell in Marble Halls," "When You'll Remember Me," "The Gypsy's Life You Lead" and "The Heart Bow'd Down" are a few of the old-time numbers rendered, the story differs considerably, however, to permit Laurel and Hardy to caper as is their wont, and to the great advantage of the play from an entertainment viewpoint. Likewise, the picture is notable for its paucity of incidental characters, such as cluttered up many of the stage versions of the early days. For sheer fun and because of its unusually beautiful music Laurel and Hardy's "The Bohemian Girl" affords unsurpassed entertainment for adults and children alike. It is fast-moving, hilarious and wholesome. It features gags galore and in none of their previous full-length pictures has the notable team of buffoons been featured in a notable supporting cast of "The Bohemian Girl," which was co-directed by James Horne and Charles Rogers, are Antonio Moreno, Jacqueline Wells, Mac Bush, James Finlayson, Darla Hood and William P. Carleton.

"Broadway Gondolier"

Warner Brothers' musical comedy, "Broadway Gondolier," which reunited the popular stars Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, showing at the Oriental Theatre on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. There is an all star cast which also includes Adolphe Menjou and Louise Fazenda. The story, which is new, concerns a New York taxi driver, played by Dick Powell who aspires to be singer and takes lessons from a down and out Italian teacher. The taxi driver gets an audition at a radio station, but through a series of humorous mix-ups, fails to arrive. The professor sings at his but his one time time vice is gone and Dick loses his chance. There is an unusual novelty in a complete radio programme, which features not only Dick, Miss Blondell and Menjou singing, but Ted Fio Rito and his famous band, the Four Tones, and the Canova Family. Others who have important roles are William Gargan, George Barbier, Grant Mitchell and Hobart Cavanaugh.

ANCIENT ROMAN CISTERNS SOLVE BRITAIN'S WATER SHORTAGE POBLEMS

British Use Water Supply Created By Caesars in Egyptian Desert

Cairo, Apr. 30.

The problems of water supply in the western desert of Egypt are being solved by the British on lines laid down by the old Roman armies.

Roman legions dug a labyrinth of cisterns underground, ranged in a series of galleries like those in a mine, and extending two or three miles. From these cisterns a reassuring supply of sweet water can be taken.

Excavation of these cisterns is going forward daily, and they are now one of the main sources of supply. These cisterns were known to the Egyptian government, and in 1932 it was suggested that they be extended to increase the popularity of Matruh as a resort. Some work has been done in the intervening years, so that the British had maps and a good start toward excavation when they began extension work last autumn.

It is supposed that these reservoirs were used to store fresh water in rainless years of the early Christian era, when, according to the story, this region was the granary of Rome.

In the years of rainfall Bedouins and Arabs are able to cultivate barley and other grains, and there is sparse grazing for goats. There has been no appreciable rain for three years. But when rain comes, these underground cisterns are filled with water by seepage through their soft sand-stone walls.

The sweet water lies over a layer of sea-water which has oozed in, but can be pumped off without mixing. Thousands of gallons daily can be taken, apparently without appreciably reducing the supply of sweet water. —United Press.

DEATH FOR EMBEZZLING

Moscow, May 1. SENTENCES of death have been passed on two ringleaders of a band who recently embezzled about £20,000.

Seven other members of the band have been imprisoned for periods up to ten years.

The judges passed severe sentences in an effort to stamp out crimes of this nature, which have recently increased in Russia.

The ringleaders worked in an Eastern Siberian retail trading office. —Reuter.

LETTER ARRIVES WITH LATITUDE, LONGITUDE MARK

San Francisco Apr. 25. In you don't know the address of the person to whom you are writing, perhaps the latitude and longitude will suffice.

A letter arriving here from the Canal Zone bore as its sole address "Latitude 37°45'53" north; Longitude 122°26'42" west.

The Coast Geodetic Survey was called upon and established that the latitude and longitude mentioned was at Frederick and Asbury Streets. But there was no one living immediately in the street.

So the letter was opened, only to find that it contained greetings to "Grace and Wallace" from "Esther."

The postman on the route was then asked. He knew at once that the couple was Grace and Wallace Fletcher at 903 Asbury Street.

They had determined their exact latitude and longitude themselves and gave it to a friend who had been visiting them from Cristobal. The friend tried it. —United Press.

The ship, which trades round the New Hebrides, had been unable to get a boat through the pounding surf.

Thanks to the native boy's courage in facing the rough seas and the sharks, the letters were delivered. —Reuter.

BIRDMAN FLIES AGAIN

CLEM SOHN, of Miami, who claims to be the only man who really flies with wings, has succeeded in a second attempt.

Sohn, wearing fabric wings, climbed into the cockpit of an air-plane, and when it had reached 10,000 feet he jumped into space.

Then he spread his wings and a web of cloth that he had fastened to his legs.

Not till he was a thousand feet from the ground did Sohn pull the cord of his parachute and the crowd expected it to tear with the sudden weight. But it held.

Sohn, while pleased with his daredevil performance, agreed that without the parachute his contact with the earth would have killed him.

DEFIED SHARKS NATIVE SWIMS ASHORE WITH LETTERS

Brisbane, May 1.

When a hurricane prevented a steamer from approaching Santo, a South Sea Island, a native boy plunged into the shark-infested water and swam to shore with four letters addressed to a planter on the island.

He had only one hand free with which to swim, for the other was held out of the water to prevent the letters from getting spoiled.

RHEUMATISM CREPT OVER HER

Began in Knee, Spread to Arm, Neck and Back

The insidious thing about rheumatism is that—like age—it creeps on unnoticed until one day you find yourself in the cruel grip of the uric acid fiend. That is what happened to this woman:—

"I first suffered with rheumatism about 10 years ago," she writes. "It began in my left knee and ankle, which swelled, and sudden pain often caused me to stumble and call out. Then it appeared in my right arm, causing sleepless nights. It increased in severity, coming on suddenly in neck, shoulders and back, the attacks usually lasting 3 or 4 days. I bought a bottle of Kruschen Salts, took it, and was amazed at the effect. Pains went, energy came, and now I walk and work with great vigour, due undoubtedly to the wonderful effect of Kruschen Salts." —(Mrs.) E. M. G.

The action of Kruschen is to dull the sharp edges of uric acid crystals—which are the cause of rheumatic pains—and then dissolve them away altogether.

"Open Town"

London, May 1. Press messages from Ethiopia report a visit of the Emperor to Addis Ababa and completion of arrangements for peaceful evacuation of the capital—which has been maintained as an "open town" since the beginning of hostilities—in anticipation of the entry of Italian troops.

The Italian invasion began on October 3 last, but the advance on the capital dates from April 1 and the Italian victory in the battle of Ashangi.

One message from Addis Ababa mentions Emperor's hands are bandaged for burns inflicted, it is alleged, by the enemy's poison gas. The Emperor is reported to have declared he will re-organise his forces saying, "The last ditch does not lie between the capital and Debra Birhan." Actual entry of the Italian army into Addis Ababa was not confirmed up to a late hour this evening, but newspapers have anticipated the event and describe the organised celebrations preparing in Rome and other Italian towns. —British Wireless.

GAS FOR PETROL A FAILURE

RESULT OF ITALY'S TRY-OUT

Rome, May 1.
Twenty-four of the Italian cars competing in the Mille Miglia—the world's longest road race—tried out the substitute fuels by means of which Italy hopes to cut down her petrol imports.

None of the winning cars was using a substitute fuel. Twenty were driven on charcoal gas and four on different blends of alcohol and fuel distilled from asphaltic rock.

The gas-driven cars were not a success. Their leader, Professor Ferraguti, was forced to retire early.

Antonio Brivio (Alfa-Romeo) won the unlimited class event with a record average speed of approximately 76 m.p.h. His time for the 1,000 miles was 13 hours 7 mins. 51 secs. Last year's winning time was 14 hours 4 mins. 47 secs, which was a record.

BRITISH FAIL

T. G. Clarke and M. F. L. Falkner, the sole British competitors, were forced to withdraw after having led the 2,000 c.c. class for three-quarters of the race.

It is understood that petrol shortage was the reason for their withdrawal.

Signor Borotto, Mussolini's chauffeur, drove six-cylinder Alfa-Romeo on a blend of 96 per cent. ethyl alcohol and a four per cent. mixture of water and castor oil. The only woman in the race was the Italian actress, Mimi Aymer. Sixty-nine cars took part, divided into seven classes.—Router.

Picture Leads to Libel Action By Wife of M.F.H.

A SETTLEMENT was announced to Mr. Justice Swift, in the King's Bench Division last month, of a libel action brought by Mrs. Hilton-Green, of West Wrattling Hall, Cambridge, formerly of Barton Mills Hall, Bury St. Edmunds, against the Illustrated London News and Sketch, Ltd.

Mrs. Hilton-Green, who is the wife of Mr. C. Hilton-Green, Master of the Cotswold Foxhounds, complained that "The Sketch" identified her with a photograph they published of a woman wearing trousers in the hunting field. Mr. Gerald Gardiner, for Mrs. Hilton-Green, said that in an issue of the Sketch last month there appeared a photograph of Mr. Hilton-Green on his horse with the hunt, looking at a woman standing beside him.

"Somewhat Unusual"

The woman was dressed in somewhat unusual attire and underneath the photograph were the words: "Mr. C. Hilton-Green, Master of the Cotswold Foxhounds, chatting with Mrs. Hilton-Green at the meet at Langham."

The woman was wearing trousers. Mrs. Hilton-Green would never have thought of appearing in the hunting field, or at a meet, in that attire, and she took strong exception to it.

As soon as the matter was brought to the attention of the defendants they expressed their extreme regret, explaining that they had received the photograph from a reputable agency. They had agreed to indemnify her against the costs of this action and would repeat an apology they had already made to her.

Mrs. Hilton-Green did not desire to make money out of the case, and was prepared to accept the indemnity and apology in settlement of a matter which had caused her extreme annoyance.

Judge's Comment

Mr. Justice Swift, in assenting to the settlement, said: "It is not for me to criticise ladies' costumes, either as they exist to-day or may be in the future, but I can understand Mrs. Hilton-Green feeling rather annoyed at anybody suggesting that she was attired in such a costume as this in public."

SCIENTIST DIED TWICE

A LONDON society commemorated last month the 164th anniversary of the death of the man who died twice.

The man, Emanuel Swedenborg, Swedish scientist, philosopher and statesman, died exactly as he foretold on March 29, 1772, in a house in Cold Bath Fields, London.

DIVINE REVELATION

In 1743 he quietly announced that he had been given a Divine revelation.

He said that he was permitted to experience the sensations of death.

Every day, for a period of no less than 27 years, Swedenborg claimed to have experienced life in two worlds at precisely the same time.

The man never preached during his lifetime concerning his Divine revelation, and made no attempt to found either sect or society.

But he left the world a spiritual interpretation of the Bible, a remarkable and inspired work of great length.

The outcome of this was the New Church, formed by a small group of men in a tavern near Dugate Hill, London, in 1789.

This organisation now has thousands of members chiefly in England and America.

MAJOR'S LIFE A 'SERIES OF LIES'

COUNSEL & INCOME TAX FRAUDS

AFTER a trial lasting five days, Arthur Harry Taylor, a retired major, aged 72, whose life was described by the prosecution as "a series of lies," was last month at Leeds Assizes sentenced to 21 months' imprisonment for defrauding the Inland Revenue.

His wife, Kate Emily Taylor, was found not guilty and discharged.

Patrick Joseph Kelly was found guilty of conspiring with Taylor to steal documents belonging to the Inland Revenue, and was sentenced to six months' hard labour.

One of the allegations against Taylor was that of identifying an unknown woman's body as that of his half sister so as to claim income-tax rebate on shares held in her name.

"Improper" Letter

At the conclusion of the case Mr. Justice Lewis called before him Taylor's daughter, Mrs. Ellen Minnie Coven, of Furze Down, S.W., who gave evidence on behalf of her father on Thursday, and said:

"This morning I received a letter from you. I don't propose to read its contents now. But I want to warn you, and everybody, that for any person, and especially a witness in a case, to write to a judge during the course of that case, is most improper."

On Taylor's behalf it was stated that he had risen from the ranks to become a major, and that in 1931 he was a member of the Leicester (Oxfordshire) Urban District Council.

His estate at the time of his arrest was worth from £8,000 to £10,000.

Air Raid Peril To Museum

HIDING PLACES FOR TREASURES

British Museum authorities have drawn up a scheme which aims at saving the priceless treasures housed there from an aerial bombardment of London in any future war.

Although the Museum has extensive cellars the trustees do not consider they are deep enough to be out of reach of modern high-explosive bombs. During the last war many of the valuables were buried in the then uncompleted Post Office tube, but this is no longer available.

Consequently a list has been drawn up of safe hiding places, to which the irreplaceable books, manuscripts, sculptures and other treasures would be taken in the event of a war. Most of these secret caches are hundreds of miles from London.

SURPRISE ATTACK PROBLEM
But the problem which perplexes Sir George Hill, the director, and the trustees is what will happen if, as is probable, war should start with a surprise air attack.

As a Museum authority said: "With the roads congested with the military and cars evacuating the population, it would be impossible to move many hundreds of tons of treasure in time."

In that event the Museum would have to take its chance. In the event of a hit the staff would attempt to deal with fire with its own apparatus.

When the Air Raid Precautions Department of the Home Office has dealt with its primary problem of safeguarding human life it will consider the protection of such national monuments as the Museum.

Napoleon Tactics Are Winning War For The Italians

ARMY TRAVELS ON ITS STOMACH IN ETHIOPIAN ROUT AT ENDERTA

Troops in Six-Day Battle Consume 10 Tons
Of Jam and 22 Tons of Spaghetti
In Excess of Camp Rations

Asmara Apr. 25 (By Mail).

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's overwhelming victory at Amba Aradam bore out another great military principle of Napoleon Bonaparte—an army travels on its stomach.

Figures issued here to-day reveal that the Italian soldiers ate during those six days of sanguinary skirmishing and hand-to-hand fighting 10 tons more of jam and 22 tons more of spaghetti than they ate during peaceful days in camp. During the entire fighting, the soldiers were marching over the most rugged territory in the world, and sometimes fighting every inch of the way.

They also found time between rifle fire to consume above and over their ordinary rations: 88,000 gallons of ordinary table wine, 40,000 liter bottles of special wines and 11,000 gallons of brandy. The surplus for other liquids included 150,000 cans of condensed milk, five tons of olive oil and 150,000 bottles of mineral water.

More Lemons Used

Lemons, which are the great military preventive against scurvy, showed an increase of 700,000. There was plenty to smoke for every soldier with tobacco rations raised by 15,000,000 packages of cigarettes and pipe tobacco.

Additional clothing included 30,000 uniforms, 50,000 pairs of shoes and 30,000 shirts. Field hospitals were set up with a capacity of 2,000 beds.

More than 900 trucks were used for carrying food and ammunition alone. The record for 24 hours was the transportation of 8,000 men in 300 trucks to a certain sector.

Division Rushed in Trucks

An entire division was transferred from Massawa, main Italian port along the Red Sea, to Adigrat, a distance of 200 miles, in 18 hours and rushed down to the Makale front, some 75 miles farther on, in 10 hours. This feat was accomplished with a column of 650 trucks.

Four thousand mules and 6,000 camels were used to solve transportation problems when trucks and automobiles were unable to penetrate through the newly acquired rock-bound land.

The list of extra food supplies for the Enderta Battle, which lasted six days from February 10 to February 15, includes the following principal items:

150,000 cans of condensed milk.
88,000 gallons of ordinary table wine.
40,000 liters of special wines.
10 tons of jam.
50 tons of figs and prunes.
11,000 gallons of brandy.
700,000 lemons.
15,000,000 packages of cigarettes and tobacco.
5 tons of olive oil.
1 ton of butter.
One-half ton of biscuits.
20,000 cans of fruit.
2½ tons of tuna fish.
150,000 bottles of mineral water.
500,000 cans of meat.
15 tons of hardtack.
30 tons of frozen meat.

UNKISSED WIVES

No Ground For Divorce In England

ENGLISH divorce law authorities are watching with the liveliest interest a Paris case in which a young French society woman seeks freedom from a "kissless marriage."

The petitioning wife's lawyers hope to prove that the fact that the wife has never been kissed by the husband is ground for divorce, a plea which is said to be without precedent in French legal history.

"MENTAL CRUELTY"

Views expressed in London: Mrs. M. L. Seaton Tiedeman, honorary secretary of the Divorce Law Reform Union: It seems clear from the report of the Paris case that the husband has had from childhood a deep-rooted antipathy to kissing or being kissed, and one can only regard such an antipathy in a man towards the woman he has made his wife as abnormal. Such treatment might easily come within the category of mental cruelty, which can sometimes lead to neurosis. All such cases require sympathetic investigation.

A prominent divorce lawyer in London: If we accept kissing as a demonstration of affection between husband and wife the refusal of a man to kiss his wife or to be kissed by her may be taken as a proof of his lack of love for her. But the law of this country does not permit a wife to sue for divorce solely because her husband has revealed such a lack of love or affection. But such a plea, coming perhaps in the category of mental cruelty or of incompatibility of temperament, might be successful in an action for judicial separation.

'Stormy Weather' In 38 Bars

Court Enlightened In
"Freak" Songs

£20,000 From "Isle
Of Capri"

The popularity of songs and the profits therefrom was heard in London recently when a lawsuit concerning the song, "Cowboy," was brought before Mr. Justice Crossman in the Chancery Division.

The action is brought by the Irwin Dash Music Co., Denmark-street, Charing Cross-road, against Mr. Michael Carr, songwriter and composer, Latymer-court, Hammersmith, and the Peter Maurice Music Co., Maurice Buildings, Denmark-street.

Against Mr. Carr specific performance is claimed of an alleged agreement to assign to the plaintiffs the world copyright of the words of the song, or, in the alternative, damages for breach of the agreement.

An injunction is sought against both defendants restraining infringement of the plaintiffs' copyright, and also damages for alleged infringement.

Mr. Carr's case is that the song was rejected by the plaintiffs and that, therefore, he was entitled to take it elsewhere. This is denied.

Mr. Dash, further cross-examined by Mr. Henn Collins, K.C. (for the defendant company), said that when Mr. Carr offered him "Cowboy," in his opinion the time was not propitious for marketing it, as "Roll Along Covered Wagon" was still going strongly.

SONG IN RESTAURANTS

In his view, any song submitted by Mr. Carr belonged to his firm, unless he gave Mr. Carr a letter of rejection releasing it. Mr. Dash agreed that at an interview in a restaurant he expressed a desire to hear the tune of the song.

Mr. Justice Crossman—In a restaurant?

Mr. Henn Collins—That would present no difficulty.

Mr. Justice Crossman—Sung by the diners?

Mr. Henn Collins—Yes, it has been done.

Mr. Henn Collins referred to a number of what he described as "chorus-only" songs. One was called "She Wore a Little Jacket of Blue."

Mr. Dash—A what?

Mr. Henn Collins—Jacket. It is quite all right. (Laughter).

Mr. Dash said that it was an exceedingly long chorus—what was known as a "freak" song.

Mr. Henn Collins—"Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" has attained popularity?—With the public, yes. That is a chorus song?—Yes, but in the old ballad form modernised.

"Stormy Weather" has no verse in the ordinary sense?—No, but it has 38 bars and is also an old style ballad, modernised. All three are "freak" songs.

Mr. C. H. O. Forry, General Manager of the Irwin Dash Co., stated that, if "Cowboy" proved to be a public attraction, it would probably bring in £8,000. He estimated that the "Isle of Capri" sold to the extent of about 500,000 copies of sheet-music and, with gramophone and other rights, realised £20,000. The success of a song depended upon proper advertising.

Lieut.-General Sir Charles Bonham-Carter has been sworn in as Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Malta, in succession to the late General Sir David Campbell, who died in March.

You, too, can have them—if you know this secret about removing film

Brushing with ordinary dentifrices can never give you the gleaming white teeth you envy. Only brushing with an effective film-removing dentifrice can do that. For film is the sticky, gummy coating that forms on teeth, obscures their natural beauty. Even worse, it glues to teeth the germs and acids associated with tooth decay. You must remove that film.

That's why we urge you to use Pepsodent, the special film-removing tooth paste. For Pepsodent contains a cleansing and polishing substance that is unexcelled in removing film from

FATEFUL DAYS

Next week, there will be set in motion an attempt by Britain, on behalf of the Locarno Powers, to secure some elucidation of the proposals put forward by Germany for the preservation of peace in Europe. Thus the issues raised by German reoccupation of the Rhineland will again come into prominence. The situation is one which admittedly calls for the exercise of statesmanship of the first order if the fullest use is to be made of the scheme elaborated by Germany. The probability is that it will not be an easy matter to secure an agreement on the lines suggested from Berlin. It would, indeed, be folly to deny that even the Locarno Powers, other than Germany, have thus far failed to agree on a common policy. In this connection, much will depend on the nature of the questionnaire to Germany and the latter's reaction thereto. Mr. J. L. Garvin, of the Observer, probably Britain's most realistic commentator, has stated that what the British people want is that its foreign policy shall be re-established upon rock-bottom principles—they want to know to what they are pledged, and that the nation shall only be involved where it is thoroughly prepared to fulfil its pledges. In particular, he urges that Britain must resolutely refuse to be committed in advance to any kind of intervention in the unsettled questions of Eastern and Central Europe. "We must not tie our hands beyond recall," he urges, "either for or against Germany, or Poland, or Soviet Russia; or brow-beaten Austria, or mutilated Hungary; or any other nation, race or system." This does not necessarily mean a free hand for Germany in Eastern Europe; it means the free judgment and unfettered policy of Britain in affairs beyond her control. Mr. Garvin's summing up of the situation is worth quoting in full: "First, the full and final recognition of Germany's equal status among nations and in her Rhineland no less than in the rest of her territory; second, mutual defence between Britain, France, and Belgium as the indispensable guarantee of their equal security and freedom; third, no entanglements in an anti-German sense of British policy in Eastern Europe. If these three rock-bottom principles are adopted as the foundations of our statesmanship, they will have the moral support of most of the world, especially of the Dominions and the United States; and there will be more hope in the sequel for the saving of peace than has existed for many a day." There will, we imagine, be few Britons who intelligently follow the general European situation in

ARE

LLOYD GEORGE

ARE caricaturists human?

The reply is: "Yes—and No." Contradictory? Certainly—but I have an excellent excuse for it. Namely, all of life is nothing but a chain—a mess of Contradictions. One more or less—what does it matter.....?

To clarify this paradoxical analysis of the Caricaturist we must first of all rivet down the fact, that Caricaturists like good hunters (men and dogs alike) are born and not made. For a matter of fact, when a Caricaturist is at work giving his victims a lifelong cure against vanity, he is more of a dog than a man. Lest I'm misunderstood let it be known, that by this canine smile I do not refer to a hundred per cent. form of atavism legs, fur, fleas, tail and other canine habits. Not at all. Simply that Caricaturists at work are led by their instinct and not by their brain. (If they are cursed at all with such excess baggage in this machine age.) And so becomes as apparent as Hitler's smile (one every Leap Year) that while at work a Caricaturist is not human, but the moment he lays aside his pencil and vitriol, he suddenly turns into the most mellowed and confused saps of all human species. He is a sort of a mild edition of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Were it not that shyness restrains me, I would claim, that we Caricaturists are more than human when away from work. We are superhuman; and it is

NOTES OF THE DAYTARIFF DANGERS

London considers significant the simultaneous announcement in England and America of the belief that large trade barriers are definite contributing factors in the war menace that is growing up today. Since the statement has been made it might be as well to analyse to some extent just what is meant by "significant." First reaction is likely to be hopeful anticipation. If these two great trading nations decide that trade barriers must be torn down, and proceed to set the example, those of us who believe in the principle of unrestricted international commerce will applaud; Hongkong, as a big distributing port, will rub its hands at the prospect of a revival of almost forgotten days of carefree prosperity in the shipping business. But by "significance" London may not mean to imply the official consideration of any such experiment. It is unlikely that any Government, or party, would risk the advocacy of world-wide tariff destruction, thus throwing open doors to the "cheap labour" products of competing concerns. Any such development might result in greater danger to peace than the circumstances it was created to correct. It is a little too early to jump to conclusions; and it would be unwise to pin hopes too high upon what may be no more than simultaneous gestures. But the possibility that Britain (and by that we mean the Empire) and the United States may be approaching some understanding which will result in freer trade between them seems to be suggested by the remarks of Mr. Runciman in London and Mr. Hull in Washington. We hope it may be true.

all its implications who will not subscribe to the policy here unannounced. It is for Britain's lenders to act with care and caution in the vital days which are now approaching.

fortune which so often consists only of her face and figure.

Not only will the charming sex vehemently veto the increase from the triple chin to the quadruple dimensions, but she will resent just as spiritedly the least assault on the "good looks" of hubby's dilapidated features. Never for one moment realising, that if wives would see husbands (holds good vice versa as well) as we Caricaturists most of them wouldn't be married to them. Being a very busy man I've had no time creation of the flabbergasted as yet to figure out whether this model's funny features, then the would prove a calamity to man-man has brains. If he reaches kind, or a blessing. . . .

HOWEVER even though this frank confession will go a long way in proving what a punishment our profession is (to ourselves as well as to our victims) it also discloses the fact, that it is a great privilege. Yes—it is a wonderful gift of the Gods to be able to decipher from the short hand notes that Fate engraved on human faces their character, and to be able to attune ourselves for a few fleeting moments to that conglomeration—to that cacophony of joys, sorrow, hopes, disappointments, tragedy and comedy that make up the Show of Shows—LIFE

WHEN one bears in mind that hangmen and caricaturists are roles allotted by Fate that never receive full recognition as benefactors of humanity, it is easily understood why they should cherish such celestial plans and dreams.

The Caricaturist soon realises, that his martyrdom cannot be in altered as long as he remains true to his art and tells the truth. As he sees it. Of course he "sees it" in rather a strange manner, but it is the truth. Nay—it is Truth with an extra, a superfine edge to it. Such as no knife and razor manufacturers have ever equalled. Now telling truth has never been either a pleasant or a profitable occupation. At least not since that hysterical and historical apple propaganda story linked with Mother Eve and Daddy Adam.

On the other hand the Caricaturist cannot escape this risky exposition of Truth if he wants to bring forth laughter. His supreme ambition in life is to teach people how to laugh at themselves, and not always at the other fellow. That in itself is well nigh a superhuman undertaking for more reasons than one. Namely, we score our bulls eye hits only on the features of men who have outstanding features. By that we mean outstanding noses, ears, chins, outbulging eyes, eyebrows, as well as Adam's apples, (the last not in a biblical sense).

LASZLO SCHWARTZ
Mild Edition of Jekyll and Hyde.MY WIFE WORKS, TOO

By E. D. Winson

I AM the husband of one of those much-discussed and oft-maligned creatures, wives with jobs.

It is my rooted belief, ingrained by six years' personal experience, that whatever may be the ethics of a wedded jointly working life, such a state is undoubtedly more conducive to happiness and contentment than can ever be a childless marriage. In which the husband is the only worker; (I purposely refrain from making a comparison with a marriage productive of children as I am not in a position so to do.) Since our wedding day six years ago, my wife and I have never ceased to be head-over-heels in love with each other, nor have we ever had a cross word, for the very simple reason that we have no time to fall out of the former or to fall into the habit of the latter. Life is too much of a snafu of happy meetings.

WE have no time to get tired of each other. Week-ends and annual holidays are delightful repetitions of veritable honeymoons.

My return from work each evening is a return to something fresh and original. I return to a woman who during the day has been seeing things for herself and who has had the stimulus of fresh contacts; and even if these contacts consist but of fresh types, frocks, and faces she has seen. I do not return to a wife who, with little else to do during my absence but combine sewing, knitting, and whatnot with a spot of neighbourly gossip, wishes to regale me with petty chitchat.

If I come back tired and a trifle irritated, she knows how to treat me. It is part of her training. She would not be a successful business woman unless she possessed tact.

HER job has instilled the necessity of always being well turned out. She is a joy to look at indoors or out. Similarly she is mentally self-reliant and can hold her own in any type of conversation.

If I wish to have a "night out" in the interests of my business I can have it without any recriminations; if it is necessary for my wife to go out, I can return the compliment without any sneaking suspicion of subterfuge on her part.

A night of whoopee is a night of whoopee for us. From it we extract the same maximum of enjoyment as in pre-marriage days.

AND our home? A delight, although we spend relatively little time in it. Of course there is the future to be heeded. And although in this future there will come the time for this woman of mine to retire from a life of active salary-earning work, both she and I regard with apprehension the advent of that day when she may sink into that obscurity of being merely "somebody's wife."

Not that it matters much, really. The time we shall have then spent as married jointworkers will have been a marvellous schooling for our onward mutual happiness.

BULLS AND INNERSFrom the Office Butts

The danger about telling your houseboy to be economical is he may think that entails, him to wear your clothes.

A Canton dress reform order prohibits the wearing of nightgowns and nightcaps in the street. This will be rough on somnambulists.

We suppose when our sporting writers refer to "burning up the track" they must be thinking of the cinder one at Happy Valley.

Then there was the bright young flapper who thought A. D. meant After Dark.

Cement business is booming in Hongkong. Getting down to concrete facts, and, at the same time, giving the Colony a solid foundation.

Celophane raincoats have made their appearance in London. People who do not wear them can always remain wrapped in thought.

It is predicted that Hongkong will become the greatest airport in the Far East. Some of our residents will then be more up in the clouds than ever.

Mr. Schwartz says that he's found more to make him laugh in Hongkong than anywhere else he's been. This makes us laugh!

A Peak resident objects to young couples spooning on Lugard Road. You can't do that there 'ere!

It is said that people are very touchy in Hongkong. We've noticed this, especially on the buses.

"FIRST NIGHT" ON THE TALKIES Charlie's Film Is A Feat Of Riotous Fun

"Modern Times"

Charlie Chaplin,
Paulette Goddard

King's Friday

CHARLIE CHAPLIN digs into the ribs of a ticklish modern civilisation in "Modern Times" at the King's on Friday next—a picture that contains some of the funniest things he has ever done and is at the same time his most serious effort to make people think.

He will certainly make them laugh as heartily as anybody has laughed for many a day. Whether his satire is as deep as he evidently intended, you will decide for yourselves.

He tilts not only at the machine age in industry, but also at a system that may make gaiety a more comfortable place than thousands have to live in and at the stern inelasticity of laws for the protection of orphaned children.

But the outstanding thing is the revelation of Charlie's voice. This is nothing less than a triumph.

The little waterfront wail (Paulette Goddard) whom Charlie had befriended is waiting for him when he comes out of gaol. She can get him a job as a singing waiter in a cafe.

Charlie knows nothing about waiting, and he cannot sing; but, with the customary valiance of the Chaplin figure in love, has a shot at it.

The waiting sequences, with Charlie swept along in the multitude of dancers and driven back into the surge bearing his heavily laden tray every time he thinks he has achieved the table of his impatient customers, will make you roar.

HILARIOUS SEQUENCE

All the little combinations of subtlety and knockabout humour that Charlie does so well as mixed irresistibly in this hilarious sequence.

Then Charlie is due to sing. He rehearses in the little sweetheart's dressing room. Always, after the confident preliminaries, he forgets the words. So she writes them for him on his cuff; and the first thing the new singing waiter does as he advances to perform his act is, of course, to shoot the cuff across the room into oblivion.

"Sing anything," sighs the little sweetheart, watching just behind the scenes. Charlie does so.

From a jumble of disconnected French, Italian, Spanish and English words he evolves, by the sheer dexterity of his pantomime and the twinkling humour of his vocalism, what might easily pass as one of those gaily mischievous little songs that mean all that is piquant in the word "Continental."

NEVER DONE SO WELL

It is positively brilliant. The feat is not entirely new, but it has never been performed with the wonderful artistry Chaplin brings to it. It is Charlie's natural voice, pleasant and clear and its use in this way will serve to drive home the argument that Charlie ought to come in the open frankly in any future pictures.

In "Modern Times" the refusal to talk, coupled with the fact that many of the captions are commonplace and unnecessary, become too much like an affection.

This is emphasised by the elaborate means he takes of bringing talk into the film, but not permitting it to come direct from the mouths of the others.

TELEVISION TALK

Thus the president of a factory whose voice is not heard in his own room, talks to workers through his television set.

Charlie, taking his modest lunch in the factory, is chosen as the subject upon whom a feeding machine, designed to save time, is tested. It is riotously funny.

The machine gets out of order and moves faster and faster. They cannot stop it, and by the time the little man, gripped by the head-rest, is grappling with the wild presentation of corn on the cob, most audiences will be wiping tears of laughter from their eyes.

When we see Charlie first his job is to fasten bolts on a moving chain. Here, too, he is at his funniest.

The steady succession of jerks gets on his nerves. He goes off his head, pulls all the levers he sees and blows up the machinery.

He is taken to hospital, is told to avoid excitement when cured, runs into a Communist demonstration and, trying to restore a red flag dropped by a lorry, is sent to gaol as a ring-leader.

THE COMFY GAOL

There he is, so nice and comfortable that when he is discharged for a comic feat of valour (after the innocent consumption of smuggled cocaine) his first thought is to get back again.

Then he meets the girl, and there are some delightful scenes, though it is in the romantic passages that the film tends to drag. Charlie seeks work again for her sake.

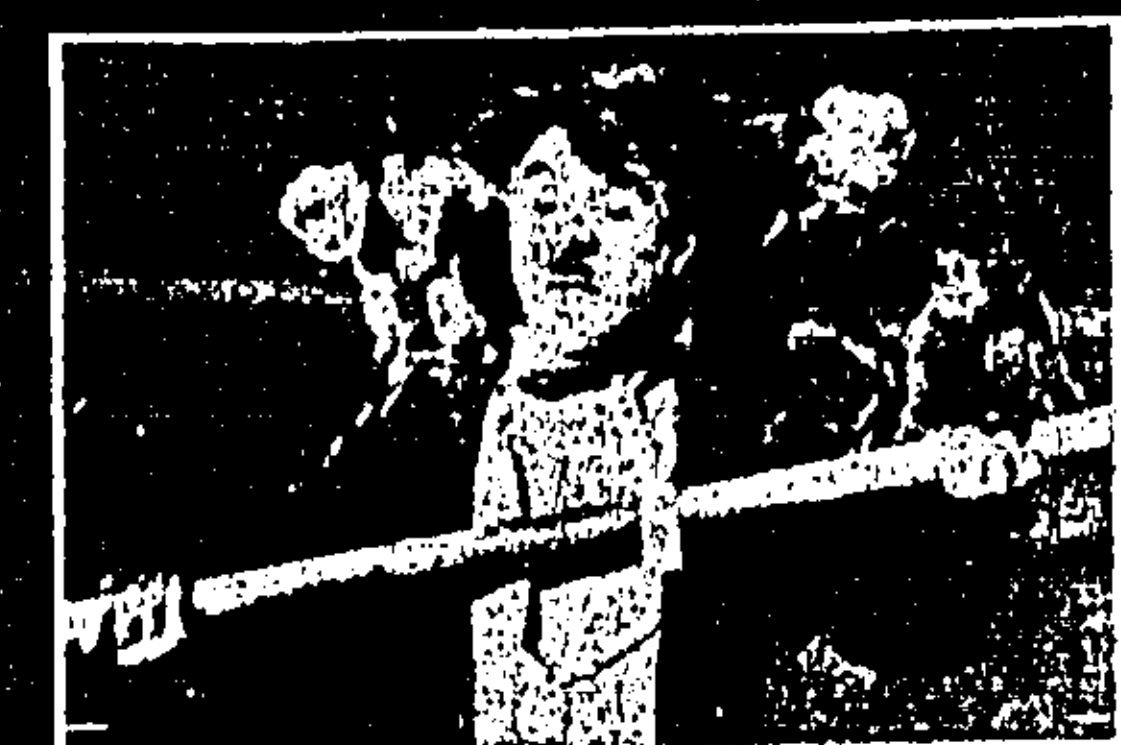

The end of the picture is indeterminate, but happy. The little man and the girl go smiling into the future along that open road which we have seen in other stories.

Paulette Goddard is charming—a pretty, slim, fresh-looking, dark-haired girl who looks as though she might be a real actress. I am not surprised that Charlie contemplates a more serious story for her.

Audiences Like Old Songs And The Stars Who Made Them

MANY variety artists famous to two generations of theatre-goers are still holding the centre of the music-hall stage.

Here are a few now appearing in different parts of Britain this month—Sir Harry Lauder, Kate Carney, G. H. Elliott, Ella Shields, Arthur Princes, Gerlie Gitana, Harry Tate, and Billy Bennett.

They were big names years ago. They are still big names. The revolutions that have taken place in the entertainment world have made no difference to their popularity.

Lauder has been on the stage fifty-four years; Tate—forty-one; Elliott—thirty-seven; Gerlie Gitana—thirty; Ella Shields came here from America in 1908; Kate Carney recently celebrated her golden wedding and still does three shows a day; Arthur Prince has been cross-talking with his thirty-nine-year-old ventriloquist's doll "Jim" for thirty-six years.

It is significant that most of these artists are comedians. Sometimes they try to introduce a different style or modern songs into their shows. Then the gallery shouts for the old numbers.

Hongkong May Have Television For The Coronation

By "FIRST NIGHT"

HONGKONG may, as the result of enquiries now being unofficially undertaken in London, be the first part of the British Empire outside London to have Television.

The high-definition Television system of the B.B.C. will be in operation in August this year. If the B.B.C. will make records of their television programmes, as they do to-day of their ordinary broadcast programmes, there is every likelihood that Hongkong will erect its own Television transmitter and use the London programmes.

Because of the wide frequency band required for high-definition television, ultra-short wave-lengths must be used to broadcast visual images.

Unfortunately, the range of ultra-short wave-length is limited to a radius of 25 to 50 miles from the broadcasting station, ruling out any possibility of the B.B.C. visual broadcasts being picked up in Hongkong direct, as are the Daventry programmes.

But a television transmitter is comparatively inexpensive and if Hongkong can obtain visual programmes from the B.B.C., expense should not deter the local authorities from installing a local transmitter.

Television receivers are admittedly more expensive than the ordinary broadcast receivers, but the B.B.C., as part of its Television Programme, are arranging for the marketing by private firms, of inexpensive sets. At present a Television receiver costs 250 sterling. It can be used either for visual or sound reception, or both.

QUASI-OPTICAL RANGE

The ultra short wave-length employed for television have a quasi-optical range—that is, their radius of reception is just over that of the human eye. The height of the aerial plays as important part in television broadcasting. For this reason, Hongkong is an ideal site for such a transmitter. An aerial at the top of the Peak would give a radius of reception that would greatly exceed that of the new B.B.C. transmitter in London, which, with an aerial 600 feet high, will have a radius of from 30 to 50 miles.

It is not necessary for wireless to be employed in television. Ordinary telephone lines can be employed in a manner similar to that used by the Hongkong Telephone Company for its wired-wireless broadcasting service from ZBW.

I understand from a reliable source that, while the Hongkong Telephone Company is not at present considering the installation of such a service devoted to Television, unofficial enquiries are being made by a prominent Government taipan regarding the advisability of expanding ZBW in order to embrace television.

The apparatus, if ordered before the end of this year, could be installed in Hongkong in time to televise the scenes of the Coronation in May next year of King Edward VIII. Coronation scenes will be broadcast by the B.B.C. by television, as well as through the channels now existing.

GUEST WRITER SAYS

AUSTRALIAN FILM INVASION SOON

Many correspondents have written recent weeks, deploring paucity of British films. How Australian Governments are tackling foreign film grip, and at same time making market for own films overseas, is explained in following article by well-known journalist recently returned to Hongkong from Sydney.

WITH the passing by New South Wales of a film quota act to operate this year, the production of Australian films, which hitherto had appeared irregularly and with indifferent success, is no longer assured and it is almost certain that in due course films from Australian studios will find their way to Hongkong theatres. Australian studios, although financed purely by Australian interests, have linked themselves with the major distributing companies in America and England in order to gain sales outside of the Commonwealth. Until the passage of the quota act, the future of Australian films was most uncertain. In the silent days a few films were made but they were of such poor technical quality that they were not screened outside Australia. With talking films there was a revival of the industry and from 1930 to 1935 Australian studios kept up a steady output of more or less good technical films.

For a time the industry flourished and it was thought that it would progress steadily, but the handicap of having no distributing organisation overseas was too great and as purely domestic screening did not return sufficient profit, one by one the studios disappeared or curtailed their output. The New South Wales quota act, which is for a period of five years, compels both distributors and exhibitors to handle stipulated percentages of Australian films, beginning at a low proportion and increasing annually.

The act had the immediate result of seeing several film companies coming into existence, most of them being connected with the major companies overseas, for the lessons from previous failures was well known, and no expense was spared in the attempts to make the films worthy of presentation overseas.

First of all it was realised that although there were good artists in Australia, stars with world-famed names and technicians with overseas experience were necessary, and immediately negotiations were entered into with prominent stars.

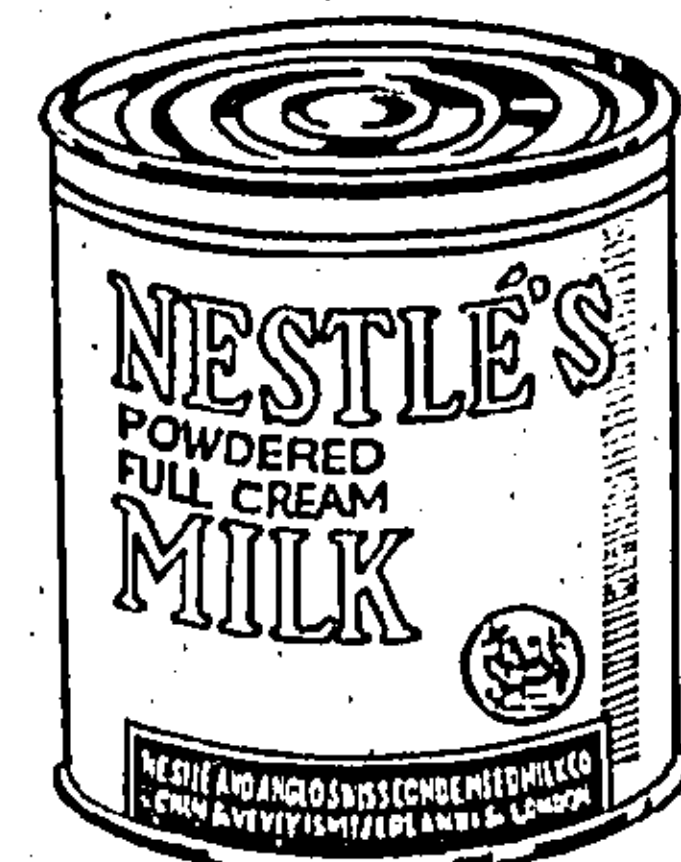

One of the first films to be undertaken was "Thoroughbred," by Cinesound Studios, a company which in addition to producing a regular news-reel had made several good films including a version of the old romance "The Silence of Dean Maitland."

Shortly after her arrival National Studios imported Charles Farrell to take the lead in "The Flying Doctor" which is being produced at the recently constructed studio at Page-wood, near Botany, Sydney. For the technical work a big team of English experts, headed by Miles Mander, was lent by Gaumont-British which is undertaking the distribution overseas. National Studios first negotiated with Richard Dix to take the role but he was unavailable.

Smiles for sale

Do you remember that sensation of horror when you first looked in the mirror and saw a gaping hole in your smile?

What a dramatic change in your appearance had been made by a flick of the dentist's wrist! Nothing spoils good looks more than missing teeth or bad artificial substitutes.

Your appearance after that unpleasant operation depends on the dentist's skill in choosing and fitting false teeth. Their shape and colour mean much to you.

There are men who devote their lives to evolving more naturally shaped and coloured false teeth. At least 15,000,000 false teeth are used in Britain every year. Four large factories are responsible for most of this output. To establish a really first-class factory you would have to sink £50,000.

"Sink" would probably be right, for, in spite of protective tariffs, there is tremendous competition from many countries, including America, Germany and Palestine.

Teeth are made in three shapes which correspond to the three main types of faces—square, tapering, and ovoid.

Dentists have to bear this in mind when choosing teeth. Wrong-shaped teeth are conspicuously false, because they are not in harmony with the face. Every tooth manufacturer has a range of between twenty and thirty shades. These shades are chosen to fit the widest possible range of natural tooth colours.

One firm examined 2,500 people before embarking on a new range of shades. They recorded the dominant, subdominant, and submerged colours in the hair, skin, and eyes, and the condition of the gums.

All these factors have to be taken into consideration in determining the right shade for a patient. Colour in false teeth is supplied by oxides of titanium, platinum, cobalt, iron, gold, and tin. These are incorporated with the basic ingredients to produce the tints desired.

In early days human teeth were used, and men used to scour the battlefields to find them. Teeth were also carved from elephants' tusks. The first substitute other than animal substances was made by a Frenchman in 1710.

FOR WOMEN

Putting new life into old Vegetables

by the Home Page Cook

WE have been gnawing roots more than usual this winter because greenstuff has been scarce. It still is.

Leaving aside for the moment the more expensive possibilities, such as sea-kale, chicory and broccoli, what have we left?

THERE is the leek, which can be cooked as follows:—

Strip off the outer leaves, trim the roots, and lop away most of the green. Then give the leeks a thorough washing, and put them into salted boiling water with a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

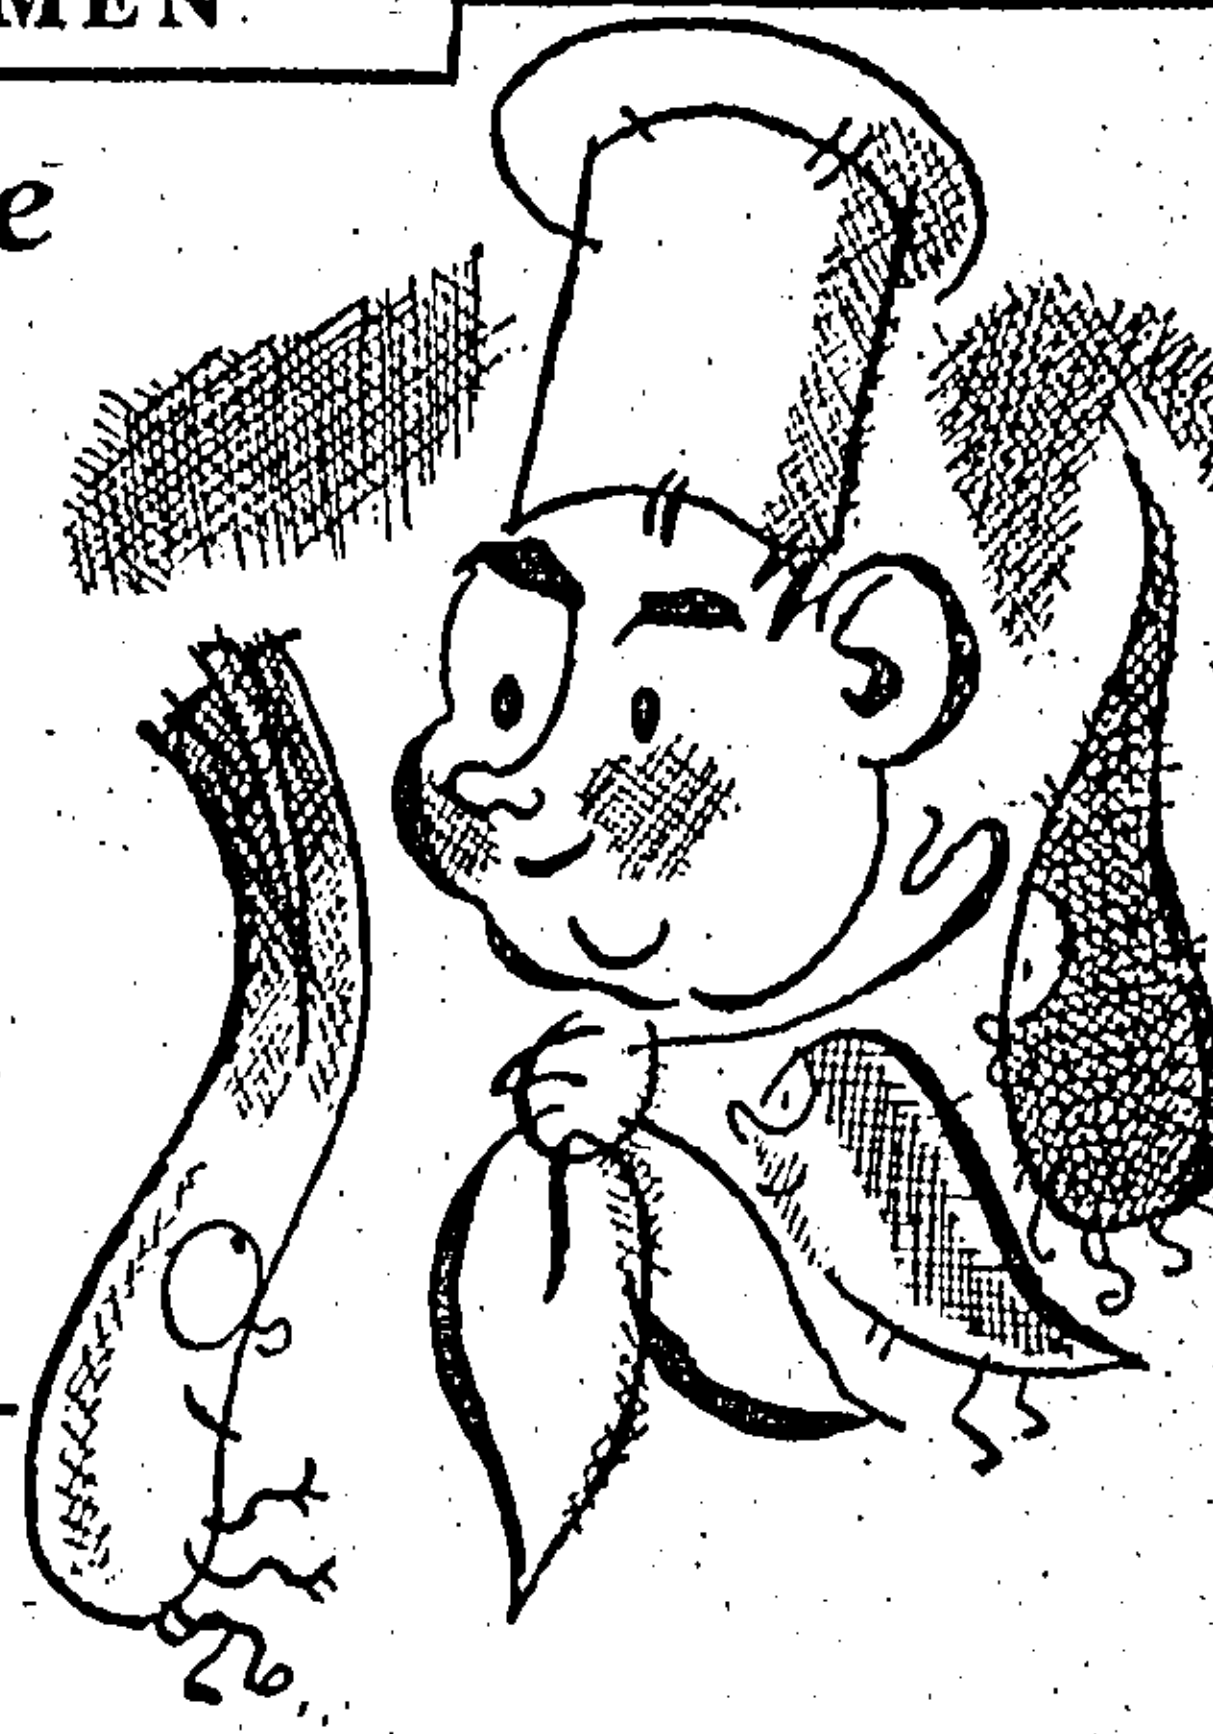

One cannot give the exact time of boiling. It depends upon the size and even the variety of the leek. But say from half to three-quarters of an hour. Anyway, boil them.

In another saucepan make a roux by smoothly mixing together two ounces of flour and two ounces of butter, and stir in half a pint of boiling milk. Boil together for a quarter of an hour, stirring well, and season with pepper and salt.

When the leeks are cooked, drain them thoroughly, lay them on hot buttered toast, and serve them with the sauce poured over them.

This is the simplest way of serving leeks, unless you like to substitute plain melted butter for the sauce. There are other ways.

Last year's vegetables need not be dull

Having boiled them, drain them well, and lay them in a buttered fire-proof dish. Coat them with white sauce, then sprinkle some grated cheese over this. Finish off with a sprinkling of bread-crumbs and some dots of butter, and bake brown in a moderate oven.

They can also be stewed in stock and put the resultant puree into a saucepan containing a little melted butter. Add milk (but not enough to make the mixture sloppy) and a little cream if you can spare it, season with salt and pepper, and stir till thoroughly hot. Serve piled on a dish, with a garnish of fried triangles of bread.

THE last method of slowly stewing in stock is admirably suited to chicory, that pale and somewhat bitter vegetable which is gradually coming into its own in this country. But it should first be boiled for ten minutes to get rid of any excessive bitterness, and have all the water squeezed out of it before it goes into the casserole.

We now come to parsnips. These are not so young as they used to be, and if there is any doubt about the softness of their interiors, mere boiling is not enough. But this must be done first until they are outwardly soft.

Then pass them through a sieve and put the resultant puree into a saucepan containing a little melted butter. Add milk (but not enough to make the mixture sloppy) and a little cream if you can spare it, season with salt and pepper, and stir till thoroughly hot. Serve piled on a dish, with a garnish of fried triangles of bread.

Or you can mix the parsnip puree with an equal quantity of mashed potatoes, season with pepper and salt, form into a flat cake or cakes, and fry till brown on both sides.

ANOTHER form of parsnip cake is made by putting some of the puree into a saucepan, flavouring it with grated cheese, pepper and salt, and binding it with the yolk of an egg stirred over the fire for a short time.

Let the mixture cool before forming it into little cakes, which are egg-and-breadcrumbed and fried in deep fat.

If a carrot has got to the stage when its chief use is for flavouring stocks and stews, remove any hard centre before, and not after, it is cooked.

The vegetable has become not only hard-hearted, but embittered, and anything with which it comes in contact will be infected with this bitterness.

Girls' and Boys' Corner

Dear Kiddies,—
Finding all the mistakes in last week's story must have stumped quite a lot of you, for there were not so many entries for the competitions. Of the goodly number of kiddies who sent in entries, however, the best were from

JOAN MacFAYDEN (aged 11 years) 107 Wong Nai Chung Road, Happy Valley in the senior section, and from LESLIE WILLES (aged 8 years) 8 East Block, Queen's Road in the Junior section. The prizes for the competition have therefore been awarded to these two entrants.

Uncle Eddie wishes to specially commend Eileen Smyth, Eleanor Snaith, Amina A. Curcuen and Yvonne Shaw in the Senior section, and Regina Xavier in the Junior Section. Eileen Smyth missed the prize by only one point.

Next week's competition is a combined guessing and drawing one.

You've got to guess what is missing in the adjoining picture and then you've got to draw in the missing parts. Prizes are announced in two of the advertisements in this issue of the "Telegraph." As usual, there will be a Senior and Junior sections—children aged 10 to 14 in the Senior Section and children under ten in the Junior section.

Murder Appeal Allowed

First Successful Application
By a Woman

For the first time in the history of Britain, a woman's conviction for murder has been quashed.

In the Court of Criminal Appeal, last month, Mrs. Ellen Harding (31) successfully appealed against sentence of death passed on her at Sussex Assizes at Lewes. She had been accused of murdering her infant son, Neville, by throwing him into the Chichester canal on December 23. Her case was that she was at the canal bank when she fainted, and the baby fell into the water, and she was unable to rescue him. The decision was taken after fresh medical evidence had been submitted.

Mr. John Flowers, K.C., in opening the appeal, said the defence was a defence under the Poor Persons' Rules. There was one point only on which he relied.

A medical witness was called for the prosecution, and his evidence was of vital importance. The defence had no evidence to rebut it, but since the trial it had come to their knowledge that medical evidence could be put before the Court which would seriously challenge the evidence given by Dr. Barber, called for the prosecution.

UNSEEN ACCIDENT

The importance of it was that, although, on the facts of the case, there was very much against the prisoner, there were very real points which were in her favour.

"Upon a fair survey of the whole matter," continued counsel, "I submit that the jury might well have been left in doubt as to whether the appellant was guilty or not. It may well have been that the medical evidence went to turn the scale against her."

The appellant was a native of a village four miles from Chichester and the wife of John William Harding, who was a canvasser for a firm in Leicester.

Previous to the tragedy Mr. and Mrs. Harding had been in lodgings in Maidstone. Appellant had four children, and there was evidence that the baby was very well nourished. There was evidence that she worshipped the baby.

She was seen sitting on a seat at the canal feeding the baby about the vital time the accident happened. Nobody saw it take place. The baby was found in the canal by two boys.

Mr. Flowers read the medical evidence given at the trial, and then submitted that the death was, in fact, due to shock by the baby either falling from the mother's arms or hitting down the canal bank and coming into contact with the icy water.

In view of the fact that nobody saw what happened, and the uncertainty of the matter, it was quite obvious that the medical evidence was of the most vital importance, declared Mr. Flowers.

MEDICAL OFFICER'S EVIDENCE

The Lord Chief-Justice (addressing Mr. St. John Hutchinson, for the Crown)—Have you any objection on behalf of the Crown to hearing the Medical Officer for Holloway Prison? Mr. Hutchinson—Not at all.

The Lord Chief-Justice—We all think that, owing to the exceptional circumstances, we ought to hear the further evidence.

Dr. John Campbell McIntyre Matheson was then called by Mr. Flowers, and stated that he was medical officer of Holloway Prison. He gave it as his opinion that the conditions were compatible with the child having died from shock through falling into icy water, and to water suddenly getting up the nostrils, and was not dependent upon the area of skin which came into contact with cold water.

"VERY DISTRESSING CASE"

The Lord Chief-Justice—I understand, Mr. Flowers, you are submitting that if you had been in a position to cross-examine the doctor who gave evidence at the trial upon the lines of the evidence given by Dr. Matheson, the jury must have had reasonable doubt as to their verdict?

Mr. Flowers—That is what I submit, my lord. I don't know whether I am entitled to say it, but one felt that possibly it was the medical evidence which settled the case against Mrs. Harding. I submit that there must have been a reasonable doubt. The jury, in fact, considered their verdict for over an hour and a half.

The Lord Chief-Justice—And made a strong recommendation for mercy. What do you say, Mr. Hutchinson?

Mr. Hutchinson—I am very reluctant to say anything to influence your lordships one way or another. I particularly don't want to press anything in this very distressing case.

The Lord Chief-Justice gave the judgment of the Court allowing the appeal and quashing the conviction.

The Dietrich Gets A Spanking

The Film: "DESIRE" (Marlene Dietrich, Gary Cooper). (Queen's, Current)

ANY new Dietrich is a film event. And when the new Dietrich is revealed as a romp through Europe with a couple of improbable crooks and a big goop of an American—the thing becomes positively startling.

I find myself blushing to reproach the denouement—that bit where the big goop of an American says he's put the Dietrich across his knee and spanked her to teach her not to pinch pearls.

"It doesn't hurt much now," says the Dietrich. It hurt me.

PLEASING WIT

What is there left to report? The above reveals that the world-celebrated Dietrich glamour has been scrapped in favour of a meretricious but wholly pleasing wit. This has been caused by the string of Dietrich's Svengali, von Sternberg, and the substitution of that popper of champagne corks, Ernst Lubitsch.

"Let's have some fun," says Lubitsch—and off we go on a gay gallop through the Pyrenees, where the Marquis de Crook (John Halliday) corners the Beautiful Accomplish (Marlene Dietrich) and the Dumb Stranger (Gary Cooper) in a castle in Spain.

There he succeeds in filching the pearls from the D.S.'s pocket (where the B.A. put them by mistake).

SPANISH MOONS

But the D.S. has a far greater success than that with the B.A. After seven long nights under a Spanish moon, though his American monthly surges upwards like an enraged grampus and he persuades the gal to take the pearls back and return with him to Detroit.

No, I know that doesn't sound a bit like a Dietrich picture; but I do assure you it is—and I enjoyed it more than any since "Blue Angel" days.

Flies Baffle Airmen

By An Air Correspondent

How does a fly land on and take off from the ceiling?

I suddenly asked this question at an airmen's luncheon in London recently.

Pilot No. 1 did not know.

Pilot No. 2 said: "Easy. It flies towards the ceiling, rolls over, flies inverted and makes a perfect landing upside down."

Pilot No. 3: "Not the fly performs an inverted loop and then lands."

Pilot No. 4: "Flies I have noticed flew near the ceiling, did a half roll, and made the landing."

Pilot No. 5: "The fly flies in the normal position in a steep climb to the ceiling and makes first contact with its front legs."

We agreed that the fly remained on the ceiling by means of its suction pads.

THE TAKE OFF

"Well, then," I said, "how does the fly take off from the ceiling?"

Pilot No. 1: "He just turns off the suction, falls off, flaps his wings and resumes his journey."

Pilot No. 2 believed the fly dropped off the ceiling, did a short inverted dive to gain flying speed, and was off.

Pilot No. 3 held that the fly, having left the ceiling, rolled over and flew away in normal position.

Pilot No. 4 declared that at the take-off the fly dropped head first and regained normal flying position almost immediately.

Pilot No. 5 more fully said that flies were "natural acrobats."

"IT'S SO SIMPLE"

In spite of much further discussion the airmen were not able to solve the problem, but when I sought knowledge from Mr. A. Moore Hogarth, Director of the Institute of Microbiology, he said: "It's simple. The fly alights on the ceiling by flying up to it at an angle and gripping first with its front feet."

"When it leaves the ceiling it releases the suction pads, makes a small glide completing the loop, and so resumes the normal flying position."

Man Hunt That Lasted 14 Years

U.S. DETECTIVES IN ENGLAND

Plymouth, Apr. 20. Two New York detectives landed at Plymouth to-night from the liner Manhattan. They are on the concluding stage of a world-wide search for men connected with an offence committed 14 years ago.

Lt. George Magee said that the search began in 1922, when an "envelope switch swindle" was committed in New York.

"Three men approached a fur dealer and offered to sell him furs for the value of $2,000 for $600," he said. "They stipulated that the dealer should produce $600, and the money was sealed in an envelope in the presence of the four of them."

The dealer then took the sealed envelope and was told that he was to hand it over on the delivery of the furs. The furs never turned up, and the dealer then discovered that the envelope contained blank paper. It had been "switched over" for the envelope containing the notes.

"Three men were arrested soon after, but two of them, who were allowed bail, absconded. Their photographs, fingerprints and descriptions were circulated to every police force in the world, and in 1928 we arrested one man. He, like the man who was not allowed bail, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment, and then we continued the search for the third member of the party."

"A few days ago we heard that he had been arrested on another charge in England. When he is released from prison on Friday we shall detain him and apply for an extradition order."

"We shall be greatly indebted to Scotland Yard, for they are the only police force in the world who are alert enough to catch international crooks."

A FRENCH VOTE ON GERMAN ENTENTE

75% In Favour

BIG POLL AGAINST SANCTIONS

SIGNIFICANT indications of the trend of French public opinion in regard to the question of sanctions against Italy, and also in favour of an entente with Germany, are revealed by the results of a referendum on the international situation conducted by the Journal des Pyrenees-Orientales, one of the leading newspapers in the south-west of France, with a highly representative circulation.

The voting was as follows:—

In favour of a peace conference to discuss peace treaties 4,872
In favour of a Franco-British Entente 2,916
In favour of a Franco-German Entente 5,550
In favour of removing sanctions against Italy 5,586
The returns show that 75.7 per cent. of the voters were in favour of a Franco-German Entente and that 60.28 per cent. were in favour of abandoning the Anglo-French Entente.

A SCOT LOSES HIS WIFE—BUT WIFE HAD LOST THE SCOT

THIS story concerns:—
1. A Scotsman.
2. His accent.
3. A voyage to "foreign parts."

The Scotsman, his wife, and a friend set out by road for Ayrshire from Oaksey, near Malmesbury, Wilts. The husband had business there which would take him most of the day.

He handed over the car to his wife and the friend.

They arranged to meet at Chippenham Post Office at four o'clock in the afternoon.

At the appointed hour the husband went to the post office. No sign of his wife, the friend, his car.

Six hours later an anxious wife phoned Chippenham police station.

She phoned from Cirencester. In the station house an anxious husband.

He said Chippenham. His wife thought he said Cirencester.

Submarine Expedition To N. Pole

WILKINS EXPECTS TO SUCCEED

Sir Hubert Wilkins, the explorer, has given the London Sunday Referee particulars of the second attempt he proposes to make to reach the North Pole by submarine. His first attempt, made several years ago, failed. This time he is confident that he will succeed.

His new plans include the use of a vessel 100ft. long and 20ft. wide which will cost at least $20,000. There will be nine in the crew, including three scientists, three engineers, and Sir Hubert.

The submarine will have several unique features. It will have no propellers, electric motors will force a jet of water through a stern-pipe to thrust the vessel through the water.

UNDER THE ICE

A single accident might be fatal. Once the submarine sinks below the ice it will be in constant danger, and so a diving compartment has been installed through which a man in a diving-suit can slip out into the water and do any necessary repairs to the outside of the ship.

And in an emergency all the crew may escape through this compartment and reach the surface—provided they are not doomed by the ceiling of ice above them.

Two special drills will stretch from the top of the submarine. They can both bore through the hardest ice, and one 60 feet long, will admit air.

The ice ranges from two to 20 feet in thickness. But if a spur of ice reaches down to 40 or 50 feet below the surface—well, the vessel and all its crew may vanish for ever in the depths of the Arctic Sea.

TRIAL CRUISES

At the end of this year the new submarine will make experimental cruises in the waters of Lake Erie on the Canadian border. If it stands up to the experiments it will set out on its great adventure.

Why are these men risking their lives in a journey as perilous as this? The chief reason is to demonstrate that fleets of submarines could be used to transport United States products to Europe via the Hudson Bay route at cheaper rates than any now in operation, and to show that submarines alone can overcome the frozen waters of Hudson Bay, and so make it a busy trading centre all the year round instead of for the present six months in the year.

Metecological observations will also be made to see if it is possible to develop a service of air-lanes across the Arctic Circle—a development which would mean a tremendous saving of time in any transatlantic flight.

For every moment of the journey the submarine will be in constant peril. But Sir Hubert is confident he will be successful.

"It was in 1913 that I first got the idea of using the submarine for Polar work. We shall avoid any collision with heavy ice-floes by staying well under the ice," he explains.

CHEVROLET INTRODUCES IN THE 1936 MODEL THE SELF-ENERGIZING HYDRAULIC BRAKES

A newly perfected braking system of the finest type ever offered in a car of the low-priced field.

Unlike the plain unreliable type of hydraulic brakes found in several makes of cars, Chevrolet's brakes are "self-energizing"—which means that much of the energy required for braking purposes is developed by the brakes themselves. As a result, stopping is easier and only a light pedal pressure is necessary to bring the car to a sure smooth halt.

EGYPT'S OLDEST TOMB
IDENTIFIED: 2,000
YEARS BEFORE "TUT"

Egypt's most ancient tomb, discovered by a young English Egyptologist, has been identified as that of the Grand Vizier (or Premier, as we should say to-day) of King Den, of the First Dynasty—about 3200 B.C.

It is thus about 2,000 years earlier than the famous tomb at Luxor of King Tutankhamen, who ascended the throne in 1368 B.C.

The discovery was made at Sakkara, 10 miles south of Cairo, by Mr. W. B. Emery, of Liverpool, who, although only 33, has already important Egyptian finds to his credit.

Several wine jars, bearing the King's seal, and name were discovered.

Living Organism
Exists 165 Years
In Adobe Bricks

San Luis Obispo, Cal., Apr. 25. Primitive life that has survived 165 years inside adobe clay bricks is being found in the walls of the ancient San Luis Obispo Mission.

The life is in the form of microscopic spores, probably the first organism ever to exist on earth. The bricks, which hold the live spores, were laid in the walls in 1722 when Father Junipero Serra founded the mission.

Dr. Ira D. Bartle, of San Luis Obispo, made the discovery, which attracted the interest of Dr. Charles Lipman of the University of California.

It is definite, Dr. Bartle said, that the spores remained in a state of suspended animation for more than a century and a half, and then began to grow again when exposed to foods after the bricks were opened.—United Press.

MAGIC TRICKS WILL
AWE SAVAGES
EXPEDITION TO ECUADOR

Now York, Apr. 28

Magic tricks will take the place of guns to protect an Ecuadorian jungle expedition now being organized by Andre Roosevelt, cousin of the President, and Cyril Von Baumann, wealthy explorer. They will sail March 27.

"Fighting these savages with modern weapons would be fatal," the Roosevelt said to-night in an interview. "There are too many of them and they are too close. They may be five or six feet from you in the jungle before you know they are there and they have a nasty habit of using blow guns with poisoned darts."

"Trickery which creates respectfulness is the only efficacious means of protecting one's self. We will carry chemicals which burn in water, sleight of hand tricks and other magical illusions."

Roosevelt and Von Baumann speak from experience. Each has done considerable exploring in uncivilized parts of the globe and they've already tried their tricks on aborigines.

They plan to tramp 1,200 miles through the least civilized territory on the South American continent. No other white men will go.

They will pay their own expenses. Scientific collections and observations will be made and photographs taken. They have evidence of ancient Inca ruins in the jungles, never visited by white men, and plan to traverse jungles where even the language of the savages is unknown.

They will carry firearms to shoot game, and hand grenades, but will depend on "marksmanship" as a guide through their magic tricks to protect themselves.

Roosevelt explained this way:

covered buried within an intact room in the grave.

Sacrificial offerings of flint knives of fine workmanship and food receptacles for the Grand Vizier's soul were also found.

DIGGING UP HISTORY

Mr. Emery is working from dawn till sunset, and is bringing most important evidence almost hourly to the light of day.

He is director under the Egyptian Department of Antiquities of the archaeological survey of Nubia, and has already made many important discoveries, including an unsuspected civilisation—the last chapter of ancient Egyptian history—about the fifth or sixth century after Christ.

And now he has delved down to find evidence of the first chapter.

MEMPHIS NECROPOLIS

Professor S. R. K. Glanville, the authority on Egyptian archaeology at University College, said:

"The importance of the discovery at Sakkara is that while most of the kings and noblemen of the First Dynasty were buried in Lower Egypt, a tomb of this importance should have been found in Northern Egypt."

"Sakkara was more or less the necropolis of the old capital of Egypt—Memphis—and therefore the results of Mr. Emery's discovery should be very important."

"How does one know that a tomb dates back to the First Dynasty? This is ascertained by the type of objects found inside, the pottery, ornaments and the state of the mummy."

In the newly-discovered tomb there appears to be an assortment of everyday utensils, probably placed there for the benefit of the soul of the dead person, which, it was believed, would return to live near the body. They are also rows of half-buried anely-shaped jars, looking as though they had been used for stores. A bundle of arrows was also discovered.

The tomb is cut from solid rock and has a depth of about 30 feet. A sloping passageway leads to the entrance. Both the entrance to the passageway and that to the tomb proper are guarded by huge slabs of rock, which serve as a kind of portcullis.

TO PLAY COLONY STARS

Initial Tour

(By "Veritas")

If plans materialise, four of Siam's leading tennis players will visit Hongkong in the near future and engage Colony luminaries in friendly matches.

Mr. Vilas Ostananda, Siamese Government Trade Commissioner, and his secretary, Mr. James I. C. Chang, who are now in Hongkong after a visit North, are anxious to make arrangements to this end.

It will be the first time Siamese tennis exponents have played outside of their own country, and their appearance here would be warmly welcomed by tennis enthusiasts.

Mr. Chang is getting in touch with the Hongkong L.T.A. with a view to the Association staging exhibition matches. Plans as yet are tentative. Mr. Chang informed me yesterday. They are firstly anxious to discover whether Hongkong like the idea. I understand the players will be sent here either at the expense of the Siam L.T.A. or themselves. They are not contemplating official International matches, but a series of exhibitions.

That Siam has several players well up to standard is indicated by the fact that they have held their own against men like Khoo Hooi-hye, former Malayan and Shanghai Champion. It is certain, therefore, they would put up good showings against the Colony's leading exponents.

It is to be hoped the H.K.L.T.A. will see its way clear to co-operate with Mr. Vilas Ostananda in this project.

DOWN AGAIN

POLICE LOSE TWO MORE POINTS

ENTERPRISING E. LANCS

Police, who were once regarded as lively contestants for the championship and were named as the best European team in the Colony, have faded away so badly during recent weeks that they will be fortunate to finish third or fourth in the league table.

Yesterday they sustained defeat when they met East Lancashire in a rearranged match, the soldiers netting twice to the Policemen's once. Football was typical for this end of the season. Forwards were cumbersome and without shooting powers. Defences were always more enterprising. Oxford and McFarley each made notable clearances in goal and Blackburn, although unlucky enough to put through his own goal was the best full back on view. Brooks and Parker were enterprising half backs, while Sandford and Smith of the East Lanes earned what forward line honours were going.

A scramble in front of the Police goal led to East Lanes opening the scoring, Sandford getting the ball clear of a crowd of players. Almost immediately the Police were on level terms Gough converting. C. Pile's timely pass from the wing, the soldiers were again in the lead, Sandford cleverly obtaining and sending Smith away with a neat pass. The fast winger outpaced Britain and centred hard. McFarley and the ball well covered, but Blackburn cut across and endeavoured to intercept. The result was he turned the ball clear of McFarley into the net.

Police had numerous opportunities of regaining ground in the second half, but the attack was listless and made but slight impression on the indefatigable Swain, Steele and Oxford.

Presentation To Sidney Strange

WEDDING GIFT FROM CLUB MATES

Presentation of a silver cigarette case to Mr. Sidney Strange on the occasion of his wedding to Miss Eileen Eardley was the happy little function which took place at the Hongkong Football Club on Thursday.

In the presence of members, Mr. A. McKellar handed the gift to Mr. Strange as a token of esteem and good wishes, paying tribute to Mr. Strange's prowess on the football field, and remarking on his fine sporting qualities.

Mr. Strange acknowledged the gift in a happy and suitable reply, emphasising how much he had enjoyed playing football with the H.K.F.C.

SCHOOLBOY IN GOLF FINAL

Cyrcil Tolley Loses To Langley

Stanley Langley, the 18 year-old schoolboy champion, and H. Bentley will meet in the final of the English Amateur Golf Championship over the famous Cinque Port course.

Langley, who is the youngest competitor ever to reach the semi-final, today beat Cyril Tolley after a magnificent match. Langley finished one up.

Bentley beat Stowe in the other semi-final match by a like score, after Stowe had eliminated Lister-Hartley in the sixth round by 2 and 1. —Reuter.

BEATEN.—Mrs. King, formerly Miss Phyllis Mudford, who was beaten yesterday by Senorita Anita Lizana, in the British Harcourt championships.

Kay Stammers Meets The Senorita

IN BOURNEMOUTH TENNIS FINAL

Bournemouth, May 1. Senorita Anita Lizana the Chilean girl "wonder", and Miss Kay Stammers (holder) will contest the ladies singles final in the British Harcourt Championship here.

To-day they negotiated semi-final obstacles when the Senorita ousted Mrs. R. H. King, conqueror of Miss Dorothy Round, after a three sets match, while Miss Stammers, playing severely, scored another straight sets win, this time at the expense of Miss. Henrotin, the French player.

Senorita Lizana had a bit of a struggle to win the first set in the tenth game, and Mrs. King played a high brand of tennis to win the second at 6-1. But as against Miss Scriven in the quarter-finals, the Senorita revealed a wonderful amount of reserved resources, and came back brilliantly to capture the final set after seven games.

Miss Stammers, whose form throughout the tournament has had "champion" stamped all over it, accomplished an outstanding achievement in beating the ranked French woman, Miss. Henrotin with the loss of four games in two sets. Both sets were decided at 6-2.—Reuter.

OVER-TRAINING?

U.S. ATHLETES AND OLYMPICS

MAY POSSIBLY BE STALE

Rome. European track and field coaches express satisfaction every time they learn United States athletes have bettered world records with the Berlin Olympic Games still four months away.

These mentors believe the United States system of submitting athletes to a strenuous season of indoor and outdoor competition in an Olympic year is just lovely.

In fact, they are willing to lay two to one odds that many of Uncle Sam's boys will be past their peak by August. It would not surprise many Continental athletic experts to see America struggling to score flat race or hurdle victories.

Athletic observers think that enough United States star performers will be burned out by the time Olympic Games open that inferior European athletes who are at the top of their form and will not be upset by a long ocean journey may score numerous surprises.

Coaches in Europe also are specialising their talent in only a few events in an effort to capture a number of individual Olympic titles. Most of them do not care a hoot about who wins the team championship. Many small nations have developed two or three excellent athletes. These boys may take enough points away from the United States to permit Germany, Italy, Finland, Great Britain or Japan to get within striking distance of the team championship.

OVERDOING IT

Boyd Comstock, former Los Angeles Athletic Club coach and now in charge of the Italian Olympic team, told the United Press that he believes Gene Yenzke, Glenn Cunningham, Norman Bright, Joe McCluskey and other leading Olympic candidates have made mistakes running almost weekly races during the indoor season. He listed in support of his statement the fact that during the close of the indoor season most races were won in slower time than during the early or middle part of the programme.

Comstock is bringing his Italian runners and weightmen along slowly, concentrating on form, observation, strict diet and training rules and participating in a schedule of practice competitions which would keep injuries and over-exertion to a minimum.

British athletic authorities are following a similar schedule. A group of 120 of the most likely contenders have been selected and are undergoing "light" training workouts and any signs of over-work are immediately remedied.

Germany is counting on the general excellent physical condition of its youths as a solid foundation upon which to develop a strong Olympic team. German coaches believe athletes will not tire of track and field before the Games since no meets of importance will be held until early June, or only two months before the Olympics opens.

CHINESE OLYMPIC FOOTBALLERS

Shanghai, May 1. A crowd of 17,000 saw the Chinese Olympic Soccer team defeat the Association Sportif Francais, the Shanghai League Champions, by two goals to one.

K. S. Suen was the only Shanghai player in the team. Lee Wal-tong was a notable absentee.—Reuter.

HOOSEN SHOWS PROMISE

Is Promoted

(By "Veritas")

The return of I. M. A. Razack and the promotion of M. O. Hoosen to the "A" team constitute features of the Indian Recreation Club's league tennis prospects for this summer. Hoosen, the most improved player in the club this year had the distinction of reaching the championship final after beating F. D. Pereira in the semi-final.

Sirdar Rumjahn has four possible partners. If Frank Pereira can turn out regularly, which is doubtful, he will pair with Sirdar. Other candidates for the distinction are A. R. Minu, A. K. Sullad and S. A. Ismail. H. D. Madar as partner, and what ever the final composition of the team, it promises to be just as good, if not better than last year, with a more than reasonable chance of winning back the title last won in 1931.

The promotion of Hoosen is a bold step, as he has had no previous experience of "A" division tennis. But it is a move which is almost certain to be justified by results. Hoosen's tennis has just reached the stage when all he needs is the experience of playing among the Colony's leading exponents, to develop from a player of promise to one of unusual accomplishment. His progress in senior grade tennis will be watched with the closest and keenest interest.

Eight players have been nominated for the "B" Division team, while at the moment six have been earmarked for the "C" Division and seven for the "D" Division.

The club will experience no difficulty in turning out four teams regularly as there is a surplus of "A" Division, and "B" Division, players. Unfortunately once again it has been found impossible to re-enter the mixed doubles league, which the club won in 1931. The club is still suffering from a dearth of lady players, and the lack of interest in the game displayed by the ladies is astonishing when one realises that 60 per cent. of the members take to the courts every year.

FULL LIST OF PLAYER

Here is the full list of players who expect to be available this summer.

ONE GAME IN THREE SETS!—Kho Sin-kie, China's leading singles tennis player struck a bad patch in the Davis Cup yesterday and lost hopelessly to Christian Bousus of France, winning but one game in the course of three sets.

FRANCE TWO UP IN DAVIS CUP

CHINA MAKES A POOR START

Paris, May 1. In the Davis Cup Competition Bousus, (France) beat Kho Sin-kie 6-3, 6-0, 6-1.

The weather was dull, and a small crowd, was present including Dr. Wellington Koo, who was making his first public appearance as Ambassador.

Kho was better than the score indicates, and made neat forehand drives, but lacked pace. His back-hand was weak and he was somewhat nervous, serving double faults at critical moments.

He lobbed short, whereas Bousus lobbed judiciously.

Kho who was constantly on the run took his defeat with a smile.—Reuter.

CHENG'S FINE FIGHT

TAKES SET FROM FRENCH ACE

Paris, May 1. Guy Cheng, who lost 6-1, 6-3, 6-8, 6-3 to Destremau, proved himself a fine fighter and won the third set, in the Davis Cup singles match after Des Tremau had led 4-2, and 6-5.

Cheng showed a great gift for seizing openings, mixed his shot well and made some sharp-angled placements.

He often passed Des Tremau, who was inclined to be careless. There were many splendid rallies, both varying the pace and taking risks.

Though he won Des Tremau tallied off rather at the end.—Reuter.

THE ORIGIN OF "LOVE" IN TENNIS SCORING

FINE SHOOTING BY ULSTER RIFLES

Carry All Before Them In Yesterday's Match

Royal Ulster Rifles yesterday fully lived up to promise when they carried off chief honours in the Services Shooting tournament which is being conducted by the Hongkong Rifle Club at Kowloon City.

The R.U.R. occupied the first three places not only in the Platoon Match, but in the Company Match. Other leading successes were scored during the day by the 1/8th Punjab Regiment, under conditions, which although far removed from ideal, were better than expected in view of the heavy early-morning rain.

A feature of the meeting was the comparatively high standard of shooting, set by the Royal Ulster Rifles, whose three teams secured the first three places in the Platoon Match out of 12 entries. Their No. 1 team (5 Platoon) won the event with an aggregate of 120 out of a possible 288, followed by the No. 3 combination with 119 points, and the No. 2 with 116.

That they were far above the other entries can be gauged by the fact that the No. 3 team of the 1/8th Punjab Regiment, who obtained fourth place, could only score 59 points. The winning teams were:

R.U.R. (I).—Cpl. Higham, Rfn. Pickering, Rfn. McGahay, Rfn. Trimble, L/Cpl. Gandy, Rfn. Swift, Rfn. Stewart, Rfn. McGroarty, Rfn. Nolan, Rfn. Smith, Rfn. Doherty, Rfn. Murphy, L/Cpl. O'Hare, Rfn. Ryan, Rfn. Weir and Rfn. Gordon.

R.U.R. (II).—L/Cpl. Patterson, Rfn. Callen, Rfn. Grundle, Rfn. Roderick, Cpl. Brannigan, L/Cpl. Barclay, Rfn. Smith, Rfn. Park, L/Cpl. Dainborough, Rfn. Gallagher, Rfn. McDonald, Rfn. Brady, Rfn. Munn, Rfn. O'Leary, Rfn. Elliott, and Rfn. Baird.

COMPANY MATCH

The Royal Ulster Rifles also obtained the first three places in the Company Match. Their No. 2 team ("C" Coy.) won the event with an aggregate of 376 out of a possible 600, the No. 4 team (H. Q. Wing) was second with 353, and the No. 1 team was third with 331 points. There were sixteen entries for this event. The winning teams were:

R.U.R. (I).—Cpl. Watson, Cpl. McNeill, Rfn. Boston, Rfn. 96 Stewart, Rfn. Stafford, Rfn. Laid, L/Cpl. Wall and Rfn. Barclay.

R.U.R. (II).—Cpl. McCausland, L/Cpl. Giles, L/Cpl. Wilson, Rfn. Baillie, Rfn. Stevens, Rfn. Beazley, Rfn. McGrath and Rfn. Ratcliffe.

The Filling-Plate (Knock-Out) Competition which attracted 22 entries, resulted in the following reaching the semi-finals, R.U.R. (I) R.U.R. (IV) E. Lanes, (III), and R.U.R. (V). The R.U.R. (I) will meet the East Lanes, (III) and the R.U.R. (IV) will encounter the R.U.R. (V) in the semi-finals on Monday. The final will also be decided on that day.

LIGHT AUTOMATIC MATCH

The No. 3 team of the 1/8th Punjab Regiment won the Light Automatic Match with an aggregate of 88 points out of a possible 160. The No. 2 team of the same regiment was second with 32 points. There were twelve entries for this event. The winning teams were:

1/8 Punjab R. (III).—L/N. Ismail, Sep. Mohd. Salwan, Sep. Atta Mohamad, L/N. Kumm, Sep. Fazel Elahi, and Sep. Mohd. Ashraf.

1/8 Punjab R. (II).—L/N. Suraj, Sep. Sep. Kaloo, Sep. Bholu Ram, Sep. Murali Singh, Sep. Narain Singh and Sep. Sep. Mohammed.

There were also two unopposed events held yesterday, "Decimal Target" and "Egg Pool." Sergeant Warwick, of the Royal Marines, won the first event with 36 points, and Lieut. the Hon. G. R. Clegg-III (R.W.F.), and Rfn. Beazley (R.U.R.) were the winners in the second.

Today's programme includes Rapid-firing at 500 yards, Snap-shooting at 300 yards, and Deliberate at 500 yards. There are over 700 competitors for these three events which are in both the "Services" and "Association" S.R. Championship aggregates. The best 18 in the "Services" and the best 20 in the "Association" events will fire at 600 yards on Monday for final order of merit. The "Services" unit with the best aggregate of eight scores in these events wins the inter-unit Cup.

Today will also see the conclusion of the individual Revolver Competition (Services) and the commencement of that of the "Association." The usual unopposed events will also continue.

The prizes to be won at the meeting are on view at Messrs. Lane Crawford's.

HAPPIER OUTLOOK FOR BOWLS

Weather Shows Improvement

PROGRAMME

A decided improvement in the weather this morning augurs well for today's lawn bowls programme. There were a sufficient number of games last week, but conditions were difficult, and in view of this, the bowls remarkably good.

Last week's unsettling defeat of the second division champions, and the promising performance of the K.C.C. against Craigiepower "A" suggests closer contests for the league honours this summer.

With the exception of the Police v. R.C.C. match, in which anything may happen, today's results appear to be fairly cut and dried. Bowling Green may have a bit of a struggle to overcome Civil Service at Happy Valley, but Craigiepower "A", Tai Koo and L.R.C. look good for comfortable wins.

In the second division Bowling Green Club are expected to make amends for last week's debacle, while other home teams who should finish at the long end of the score are R.C.C., C.C. and the Football Club second string. Craigiepower, who surpassed any previous performance last Saturday, need only to repeat such form to earn points from H.K. Electric.

Fixtures and selected teams follow.

STILL A MYSTERY TO THE HISTORIANS

SOME INTERESTING THEORIES ADVANCED

The origin or derivation of the word "love" in the scoring of lawn tennis has for long puzzled the historians of the game, many of whom admit themselves unable to offer an explanation. Players usually take the word for granted to mean "nothing" and leave it at that. One of the best explanations of the mystery is contained in the late M. D. Whitman's "Tennis Origins and Mysteries," from which are the following extracts:—

The players of to-day who call the score so glibly may be surprised to know that they speak a language which has been a puzzle for centuries. While the use of "love" in tennis scoring still remains obscure, the use of the word love is the greatest mystery. It is so mysterious that it is not discussed in an authoritative way by any of the historians. Although of comparative recent origin, for the word has no foreign equivalent and was first used by the English, no one really knows why it is used, nor exactly when it was first used. Only a few casual references or bold assertions appear in (real) tennis literature. For example, one author states distinctly that the word comes from an old Scotch word, "loaf," meaning "nothing," and this has been repeatedly quoted. According to the authorities, however, on such word has been used at any time in the Scotch language. Most writers who mention "love" at all, dismiss it with a hope-less gesture. There are, however, certain theories, legendary and otherwise, that are interesting to consider.

One of these, which has come down by word of mouth for many years, is to the effect that the French, the earliest exponent of real tennis, in making up a score to indicate no score, made the figure in an elliptical form. This figure often had the appearance of an eye, and so the French called it "l'oeuf" (the egg). It has been said that when the English learned the game from the French they heard the French calling "l'oeuf" for no score, and this sounded to them like the word "love," so they called it "love," and have called it so ever since.

To support this theory an analogy is drawn from the game of cricket. In that game the zero or "0" placed against the batsman's name in the scoring sheet when he fails to score is used to designate "nothing," and this score for a long time has been called "the duck's egg." The difficulty with the argument is that in real tennis the points in each game are not placed upon a score board today, and there is only a shadow

FINISHED!—Gamble, who has announced that he will not play football again. Gamble, a former I.K.C. player, sustained two leg injuries this season, and has decided to take no further risks.

shortened later to "gratia," meant literally "for favour" or "love," but it came to mean in Latin just what it now means in English, "gratia," "for nothing."

Down through the centuries similar expressions appear. The first application of the phrase to a game was in 1476, Samuel Butler, in Industria sive, and play for love and money too. In 1723, Balfour, in translation of Drummond's famous dialogue on tennis, treats nothing as love: "I have seen those who the game that had so many for love." Similarly, we find, in 1776, an old saying used by shopkeepers to encourage their customers to look at their wares: "See for love and buy for money." And in 1742 the pillow is used by Boyle in his rules on the game of what. "To play for love in competitive games meant to play for nothing."

LAST OF THE PAGANS

Adapted by CHARLES REED JONES from the Memoirs of Mayet Pictura

Lilleo, a Tapani maiden, is in love with Mala, a Tapani warrior. Taro the chief of the Tapanis, unable to win Lilleo for himself, contrives to have Mala taken to the island of Patia and put to work in the phosphate quarries. Hundreds of Tapanians labour there in virtual slavery. Mala and the Commandant are entangled when a tunnel collapses, and Mala saves the Commandant's life. To reward Mala, the Commandant sends for Lilleo. Taro refuses to release her. Lilleo goes away on board a schooner that is bound for Patia. The Captain discovers her and plans to return her on her next trip, for he dares not sacrifice his trade with the Tapanis by antagonizing their chief. Lilleo escapes from the ship and joins Mala.

CHAPTER XI

With a happy sigh, Lilleo waved to Mala as he departed for the quarries the next morning. For Mala had assured her that now, at last, they would always be together. The Commandant had promised to get his woman, and the Commandant was a Tapani, a good man, and one to be trusted. Mala, unable to resist the tempting figure of his wife in the doorway, turned and ran back to her. Giving her a hasty, bear-like hug and rubbing his nose amorously against hers, he whispered a few words into her ear. Then, with a shout of happiness, he dashed towards the quarry.

The miserable machine dropped the tape curtain across the doorway of the fare behind her. Inside again, she sang gaily as she went about her household tasks. A sound outside the hut startled her. She ran to the door, expecting to see Mala, but she retreated within again, alarmed, as she was confronted by Robbins and two other Tapanis.

"I have come to take you back to your island," Robbins called to her. Lilleo was stunned. Escape, she knew, was impossible. Silently, she came out of the fare and followed her captors down the dusty road.

Robbins returned her to her cabin on the schooner and locked the door securely behind her. The latch above through which she had escaped, was nailed down securely.

"I guess that ought to hold her," he told Buckley, when he finished. "Looks to me as though it'll have to hold her for a couple of days," the Captain remarked ominously.

"Well, never pull out of here to-night. Unless I miss my guess, we're due for a real blow."

A crash of thunder seemed to confirm him. A sudden wind swooped through the lugger, and the ship rocked and creaked at its moorings.

At the quarries, Mala and the miners worked slowly and with great difficulty. The rising wind gathered the phosphate dust and blew it about in swirling clouds.

Hastings blew three shrill blasts on his whistle, and the men turned from their work to fight the wind and rain down the road to their shelter. Mala broke away from the others and sprinted towards his home and Lilleo.

"Lilleo! Lilleo!" he sang out, as he dashed into the fare.

There was no answer. Remembering the day that she and the nut trees, he decided that she was playing a joke on him now.

"Lilleo! Lilleo! Where are you?" Thwarted by the fury of the hurricane, he stumbled down the road.

"Lilleo! Lilleo!" he screamed, but his agonized cries were muffled by the howling wind, the roaring thunder, and the pelting rain. Mala fought his way to the office of the Commandant.

"Where is Lilleo?" he demanded angrily. "What have you done with her?"

Brannon felt for the boy, but he was powerless to help him. He steeled himself for a gruff reply.

"The woman must go back, Mala. Taro, the chief demands her."

Mala pleaded. He wept. But the Commandant was adamant.

"Go back to your fare!" he ordered. "Hurry!"

For a moment, Mala faltered. He faced the man with loathing. Once more, he had trusted a Tapani, and once more, he had been tricked.

Slowly, he turned and dragged himself out of the office, a sad dejected spirit, dumb with grief and hatred.

The storm raged and thundered. Buckley's schooner groaned and tossed against the jetty.

The ship tore angrily at its moorings. Now, it crashed against the pier with a sickening crunch of splintering wood, rocked and tossed, it tumbled crazily about, twisting, jerking, trying, almost humanly, it seemed, to free itself from the ropes that held it fast.

Below deck, Lilleo was tossed about as the ship lurched and dived. In the dim light of the wildly swinging oil lamp, the frantic machine extricated herself from the jumbled mass of furniture and struggled towards the locked door. Lilleo's cries went unheeded, for Buckley and his crew had abandoned the ship and left it to sink in this sea that defied all men.

When Mala left the offices of the Oceanic Phosphate Company, a broken, betrayed man, he set off aimlessly down the road, oblivious to the elements, little caring whether he lived or died. A splintering crash aroused him. A blinding flash of lightning lit up the hated ship.

Swinging crazily about, the schooner, up the jetty. Quickly, he was alert again; the Commandant had said that Lilleo must go back; Lilleo must be on that ship. Bracing himself against the wind, Mala raced towards the ship, towards Lilleo.

As he reached the jetty, the plies collapsed beneath him. Clinging desperately to the nearest hawser, he fought his way up the swinging rope to the deck of the ship. Lurching along the tossing deck, he screamed out for his woman. "Lilleo! Lilleo!" The pounding of the ship against the broken wharf and the roaring of the wind answered him.

"Lilleo! Lilleo!" Then, through the noise and uproar of the storm, he faintly heard a thin, shrill cry, "Mala!"

Mala battered furiously against the door of Lilleo's cabin. Again and again, he crashed his powerful shoulders against the door. Finally, it broke from its hinges, and he was catapulted into the room. As he careened across the cabin, a great wave washed over the ship, pouring its angry waters through the door. Lilleo lay limp in a pile of wreckage on the floor.

Pulling her to her feet, he held her to him for one brief moment. Then, half-carrying her, half-dragging her, he made his way to the deck. Desperately, Mala looked about for a way to safety. Lilleo clung to him. As he tried to steady her against the tossing of the ship, a rushing wave lifted them high and dropped them on the wharf.

Mala dragged Lilleo to her feet, and they made their way towards the shore. Then, as they plunged on, Mala spied a sturdy cutter, anchored near-by, sheltered somewhat in the lee of the jetty.

For a moment, he hesitated as his great problem wracked his brain. His mind made up, he shouted his desperate plan to Lilleo, and she nodded her approval. He held her tightly, touched her nose with his, tore himself away, and dived into the sea. Lilleo followed him.

Protected from the raging wind by the jetty, they struck out for the boat. What wind swept through the twisted piles of the falling pier carried them on and speeded them to their goal. In the cutter, Mala inched Lilleo fast to a ring-bolt. He slipped the mooring, and the cutter pitched and tossed as it scurried forward before the wind. Mala clung to the tiller and began his night-long battle against the cruel, atea, the raging sea.

A peaceful sun climbed out of the horizon, rising in all its tropical glory to shine again, now that the hurricane had spent its fury and had fallen back into the sea whence it came.

A badly battered cutter floated seawards towards a nearby isle. Mala stood silently, his back against the stern-post, holding the tiller in his strong grasp. A gentle wind and an incoming tide behind him, the Tapani guided his sturdy vessel straight for the shore line, fringed with the beckoning, welcoming arms of waving coconut palms.

His eyes rested fondly on the sleeping Lilleo. With a faint smile and a twinkle of impish mischief in his eye, he let a few drops of water trickle down upon her face. She opened her brown eyes with a start. Seeing Mala, she reached out to touch him, to reassure herself that her true reality stood before her.

"Lilleo," Mala's voice was tired, but tender, "wake up. A new island—our island! There, we shall make our home!"

"Ata!" Lilleo gazed for a moment at the distant palms. "It is nehehe, beautiful."

She snuggled in his arms, contented at last.

"Ata peeps, I am so happy," she murmured.

Mala's strong arms held her fast. They clung together, triumphant in the glory of youth, forever free to live and love—Mala, Lilleo's fan, and Lilleo, Mala's heroine!

NEW BRAIN TESTS FOR BRITISH CHILDREN

Tricky Questions for Ten-Year-Olds

JUST TRY THESE
Education has changed since the elder Mr. Wellen declared that the best way of sharpening a boy's wits was to let him run wild about the streets.

Education has become scientific. Lately it has put forth the "intelligence test" which is now being applied as part of the secondary entrance examination to thousands of elementary school children over ten and under twelve. The examination is being held throughout the country this month. It is compulsory.

The test may enrich the experts' files, but it will make parents ponder. By this measure some parents would qualify for Standard One.

For instance, one section is given up to sentences which have to be completed with the appropriate word of four.

Here are examples:—Me is to you, as mine is to yours, his, hers, theirs; Navy is to Army as sailor is to battleship; soldier, sea, warfare; Pocket is to coat as cupboard is to room, trousers, purse, drawer; Something is to nothing as riches are to wealth, poverty, money, miserliness. There is a time limit for the answers.

READ THIS CAREFULLY
Later comes this passage:—"The party rode for eight or, it might be, nine, miles until the sun began to slope down to the west, and their shadows grew longer and longer on the road in front of them."

"Careful and wary they had to be for there were unseen but watchful eyes on every side. It was a relief to them all when the track opened on to a wide main road and they saw in the distance the place towards which they travelled, the place where they would find food and shelter for themselves and their animals."

Having read the passage, the child, in a set time, must answer these questions from the answers given:—How many people were travelling?—Eight or nine? It does not tell us enough to say.

How do you think they travelled?—On foot? In motor cars? On horseback? What time of day was it?—Morning, evening, or night?

In what direction were they travelling?—North, south, east, or west? Did the party see the watchers?—Yes or no? It does not tell us enough to say.

Were the watchers friends or enemies?—Friends? Enemies? What kind of road were the travellers on to begin with?—Wide or narrow? It does not tell us enough to say.

Was the place towards which they travelled just at the junction between the two roads?—Yes or No? It does not tell us enough to say.

The intelligence test has been adopted by the London County Council, and teachers, on the whole, approve.

Mr. W. J. Pincombe, secretary of the London Teachers' Association, said to a reporter recently:—"The secondary schools' entrance examination has gone through three phases. Originally it was a very diffused affair. Then it concentrated on English and arithmetic. Now there is a growing feeling that these two subjects do not sufficiently test the real intelligence of the child."

"London has introduced the intelligence test within the last two years. Records show that it has so far produced much the same results as the established papers."

"The West Riding has had an intelligence test for 12 years, and a number of counties have something similar."

Dr. Vaughan, former headmaster of Rugby, does not care for the intelligence test. After twice submitting 500 boys to a test, he found that while the really stupid boys failed completely, the very ablest did not do so well as those in the second flight.

His Excellency the Governor has nominated Mr. John Robertson Masson and Mr. Li Tse-long as members of the Court of the University of Hongkong for a period of three years.

Women Go To Eton

FOR THIS FASHION

A FORM of Eton jacket for women is gaining popularity—particularly among those who work for their living and have to go straight to dinner appointments from the office.

For even the most formal dinner engagements versions of this mess-cum-Eton jacket will be worn.

But you need to be quite contradictorily feminine for this mannish idea.

BROKERS' LOAN LAW WATCHED

HOPE FOR RELAXATION AFTER TRIALS

New York, May 1. A conference of Stock Exchange officials with the Federal Reserve Governor on the new regulations covering brokers' loans by banks, effective to-day, was watched interestedly.

SANCTIONS TAKE EFFECT

LATEST FIGURES IMPRESSIVE

London, Apr. 1. The League Nations published to-day new statistics on international trading with Italy, which reveal that during February the pressure of sanctions was greatly increased.

Figures for March, though not yet published, are reported to be of even greater significance. Imports of all countries from Italy and Italian colonies in February, 1935, amounted to 16,336,000 gold dollars, but in February, 1936, had fallen to 6,737,100 gold dollars.—British Wireless.

INFLATIONARY MEASURE

OPPONENTS SAY IT CANNOT PASS

Washington, May 1. The leaders of the House of Representatives to-day said that although they could delay the vote on the Frazier-Loomis Inflationary Farm Mortgage bill until May 25 by a parliamentary manoeuvre, they would permit it to come up for voting on May 11.

One of the Whips, Representative Patrick Boland, Democrat of Pennsylvania, said that 90 Democrats and 27 Republicans will vote for the Bill, while 42 votes are doubtful.

He expressed the opinion that a defeat of the Bill by at least 40 votes is certain.

Proponents of the Bill are at present seeking the support of the doubtful voters.—United Press.
